Phantom Jet Downs 11th Red MIG Fighter

Report Two U.S. Planes Lost Friday

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. Air Force Phantom pilots slashed another MIG fighter from North Viet Nam's defense Saturday in a dogfight 100 miles northwest of Hanoi. It was the 11th to fall, against a loss of 3 American planes, in such combat since last spring. Ground gunners remained the greatest hazard to the raider squadrons.

Briefing officers announced two planes—Navy Crusader and an Air Force Thunderchief—were lost to antiaircraft fire during extensive attacks Friday. A Tass dispatch from Hanoi declared seven were shot down that day.

Bring VC Fire

Communist fire from neutralist Cambodia stirred up U.S. 1st Infantry Division troops who for a week had been methodically wiping out enemy base camps and supply depots northwest of Saigon on the Vietnamese side of a frontier river, the Rach Beng Go.

About 50 guerrillas shot from their sanctuary across the 50-foot-wide river in a diversionary action as Americans pursued about three Red platoons that had been spotted in Vietnamese territory.

The troops lashed back with machine guns and artillery but stayed on their own side of the river to avoid a graver international incident. American losses were termed light. There was no estimate of the toll among the Viet Cong.

Air action remained dominant otherwise both north and south of the border, but spokesmen said U.S. Marines had killed 4 Viet Cong, and patrols of the 25th Infantry Division accounted for 14.

Within Saigon, 10,000 Vietnamese police and paratroops were mobilized against a possibility that Communists would use a unionist May Day parade Sunday to stir up rioting and screen grenade attacks. The U.S. armed forces radio urged all Americans not on duty to stay off the streets.

Fear Union Force Mayor Van Van Cua has expressed fear that the unions, once a powerful element in Vietnamese politics, might attempt to seize power. A Buddhist student group scattered leaflets urging a "fight for peace, independence, national sovereignty and labor rights."

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge arrived in Rome on his leisurely flight home for a Washington review of Viet Nam policy and problems next weekend. Vatican sources said Lodge probably would confer with Pope Paul VI Monday.

In an interview for Japanese television made public after he had taken off from Saigon, Lodge said, "I think we are ahead of what we were last summer (in the war effort and the rural pacification program) and are very much ahead of what we were last spring."

At the same time, however, a belief was expressed in high places here that strategists in North Viet Nam are exerting more control than ever over Communist conduct of the war in the south.

And there was a boost in estimates of North Vietnamese infiltration from last year's figure of 4,500 a month. American authorities said they are reasonably certain more than 20,000 have entered South Viet Nam since Jan. 1.

No Peace for Now

In Paris U.N. Secretary-General U Thant reported after a two-hour talk with President Charles de Gaulle: "For the moment we agree that there is no possibility for a settlement of the war or for any new peace attempts."

The latest American overture along that line — issued by Senator Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana April 18 — was denounced again in Peking. Premier Chou En-lai told a rally honoring a visiting Albanian delegation it was a fraud.

Mansfield suggested efforts to arrange an Asian conference to bring about "a direct confrontation" (Continued On Page 13)

Blast Slowdown In LBJ Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson is finding it touch and go to offset the defection from his Great Society programs of some Democratic Viet Nam war critics and others facing conservative GOP opponents.

The White House put on its most intensive lobbying campaign of the year before the Senate voted 46 to 45 last Wednesday to write into an appropriations bill $12 million for his rent-subsidy program.

After the Senate Appropriations Committee had voted 15 to 12 to strip the item from the bill, Johnson deployed his forces to carry the word that restoration of the funds was an absolute must.

Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien, an old hand at congressional liaison, and Mike Manatos, a presidential administrative assistant, were everywhere.

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall hurried to Capitol Hill to reassure Sen. E. L. Bartlett, D-Alaska, that he will get action on housing subsidies he wants for his state. Bartlett voted with a majority of the Appropriations Committee to lop off the rent funds because he said he wasn't arousing any interest within the administration for his Alaskan projects.

Robert C. Weaver, secretary of housing and urban development, helped placate Bartlett and did what he could with other critics of the rent program. But Johnson obviously had been forewarned that some changes had taken place since the Senate voted 47 to 40 last July 15 to authorize the rent subsidies.

When Wednesday's countdown came, Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., Stephen M. Young, D-Ohio, and Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., switched from their 1965 support of the program to opposition. Hartke and Young have been in the forefront of Viet Nam critics.

McIntyre faces conservative Republican opposition for re-election. So does Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., who voted for the housing program in July but was paired against it in April.

Pairs are used to denote senators' positions when one or both are absent. They do not count in the roll call.

Johnson did not manage to persuade any senator who opposed the rent program last year to vote for it Wednesday, although Sen. Alan Bible, D-Nev., who was against it, then permitted himself to be paired in support of this time.

The President and his men were not more successful than opponents in rounding up support from the 13 senators who were absent last July but voted this time. Each side fielded six current votes out of this group.

Sen. Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, persistent critic of the President's Viet Nam course, was named chairman of the important Senate Public Works Committee when the 88th Congress was organized in January, 1963, and also took over as chairman of the Flood Control-Rivers and Harbors subcommittee.

He was recognized as a legislative authority on federal highway programs, problems of the aged and aging, education, la-

Senator McNamara Dies At 71

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Pat McNamara of Michigan, serving his 11th term in the Senate, died Saturday night at Bethesda Naval Hospital where he had been under treatment since March 11. He was 71.

The senator suffered a stroke Saturday afternoon, an aide said, and died at 8:40 p.m.

He entered the hospital for treatment of a blood clot, which settled in a lung. In January, he was hospitalized for a time with a thyroid condition.

A Democrat and Michigan's senior senator, McNamara was named chairman of the important Senate Public Works Committee when the 88th Congress was organized in January, 1963, and also took over as chairman of the Flood Control-Rivers and Harbors subcommittee.

Deny Proposing Strategy Shift Within NATO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara returned from London Saturday convinced that allied leaders now accept the basic U.S. position that any Communist attack on West Europe should be met by a carefully controlled response, rather than automatic use of nuclear weapons.

Sources pictured McNamara as elated that, for the first time, the just-concluded London talks on NATO nuclear strategy had produced a meeting of minds between the United States and both the defense ministers and military chiefs of key NATO countries.

Reports False

But this elation turned to dismay, sources indicated, when McNamara read published reports saying he had proposed a drastic change in the basic U.S. position.

Those reports said the United States had proposed a new policy which would junk the carefully measured response and substitute an automatic, though limited, nuclear reply to any attacks on NATO territory.

McNamara was asked at the airport whether any new nuclear strategy is in the works for NATO.

He replied: "Certainly not as a result of our discussions of the last few days."

And soon thereafter the Defense Department, obviously under McNamara's orders, rushed out a statement saying the reports of a change "are not correct."

No Proposal Made

"At no time and in no way did the United States propose a change in the use of nuclear weapons in defense of NATO territory," the statement said.

"Secretary McNamara emphasized again, as he has before, the belief of the United States government that NATO must possess both nonnuclear and nuclear forces adequate to deal with a wide range of threats, with the power appropriate to each."

This appeared to be a reference in part to the long-standing U.S. position that the NATO countries must strengthen their armies and other conventional forces so they can meet any Communist attack at the Iron Curtain and hold it off long enough for political and military leaders to assess the situation and gauge the seriousness of the attack.

Fear War

Officials noted that automatic atomic response could mean the triggering of a nuclear war upon as slight a provocation as a small-scale Communist ground feint or reconnaissance.

Such a small-scale penetration could be handled by appropriate conventional forces without bringing on nuclear war, it is believed.

There were other reports that flood waters in some sections had reached a depth of 15 feet.

The levee break was about 2½ miles west of U.S. Highway 71. Both 71 and State Highway 1 — main north-south arteries — were still open, at that time, Pettis said, but secondary east-west roads were closed by highway department crews.

The Caddo Parish — county — Sheriff's Department said the floodwaters might spread as far as the outskirts of Oil City.

The bayou flows into the Clyde Place Canal, which, in turn, flows into 12-Mile Bayou. This is part of a network of drainage courses in northwest Louisiana. The nearby Red River continued to push to an expected crest Tuesday of 30 to 31 feet. Floodstage is 30 feet.

Storms Threaten Further Flooding

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New waves of violent thunderstorms sent more waters swirling Saturday into swollen northern Texas streams, threatening additional flooding in the water-soaked area.

At least 12 persons died in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and 12 others drowned in floodwaters in the northeastern part of Texas during the week-long rains that caused millions of dollars in property damage.

Complete Marine Combat Training

Wayne Martin

Bruce Smith

David Baker

Three area Marines have recently completed individual combat training at Camp Pendleton, Calif. They are Private Wayne Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Estel Martin of 305 East Washington, city; Private Bruce W. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Reynolds of 702 Daly Drive; and Private David V. Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Baker of Murrayville.

The four-week course included over 200 hours of instruction under simulated combat conditions, covering squad tactics, guerrilla warfare, day and night combat, patrolling and the use of infantry weapons.

Their next stop is four weeks of basic specialist training in their military occupational field. Marines to be assigned to infantry units will be taught infantry sub-specialties, such as the machine gun, grenade launcher, rifle or mortar. Marines to be assigned to highly technical specialties will be sent to military technical schools for their specialist training.

Leathernecks bound for the Pacific will receive more training when they report to the Staging Battalion at Camp Pendleton, Calif. This training will emphasize jungle warfare, patrolling, and civic action based on experience gained in Vietnam.

Local Girl Wins In C. D. Of A. State Contest

Announcement has been made that the poem composed by Miss Colleen Carmody, an eighth grade pupil at Our Saviour's School, won first prize in the 7th, 8th, and 9th grades division at the State Convention of Catholic Daughters of America held in Chicago on April 22, April 23, and April 24. There were 126 entries in this division. Miss Carmody's poem will now advance to the National competition of the contest sponsored by all Courts of Catholic Daughters of America. Miss Carmody is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Carmody, 538 Westgate. Mrs. Donald Blesse and Mrs. Edward Jordan attended the meeting in Chicago as delegates from Court Our Saviour.

The April meeting of Court Our Saviour was held on April 21 at the K of C Hall with Mrs. Blesse, Grand Regent, presiding. Reports were submitted from various standing committees and donations to the Illinois Heart Association, American Cancer Society, and the Sacred Heart Program were approved. Mrs. Don English, Mrs. Norbert McGinnis, Mrs. Barney Lewis, Mrs. Edward Finn, and Mrs. Etta Roach, all members of the nominating committee, presented a slate of officers to be voted on at the next regular meeting.

Mrs. Harold Johnson and Mrs. Mary Lahey, co-chairmen of the Annual May Breakfast, announced that the breakfast would be held at the Holiday Inn on Sunday, May 15, immediately following the 7:30 o'clock Mass. All members wishing transportation may arrange for it when making their reservations with Mrs. Roger Jacques, Mrs. George Foster, or Miss Agnes Teeffey. All reservations for the breakfast must be made by May 10.

A social hour was enjoyed following the meeting with Mrs. Don English and Miss Margaret Carrigan co-chairmen. Others

One-Fourth of Mankind

Ch'angan, Metropolis of the World

Today many Chinese still call themselves Men of T'ang. The Chinatowns in many American cities are called Tang-jen Chieh which, literally translated, means Streets for Men of T'ang. —Dun J. Li

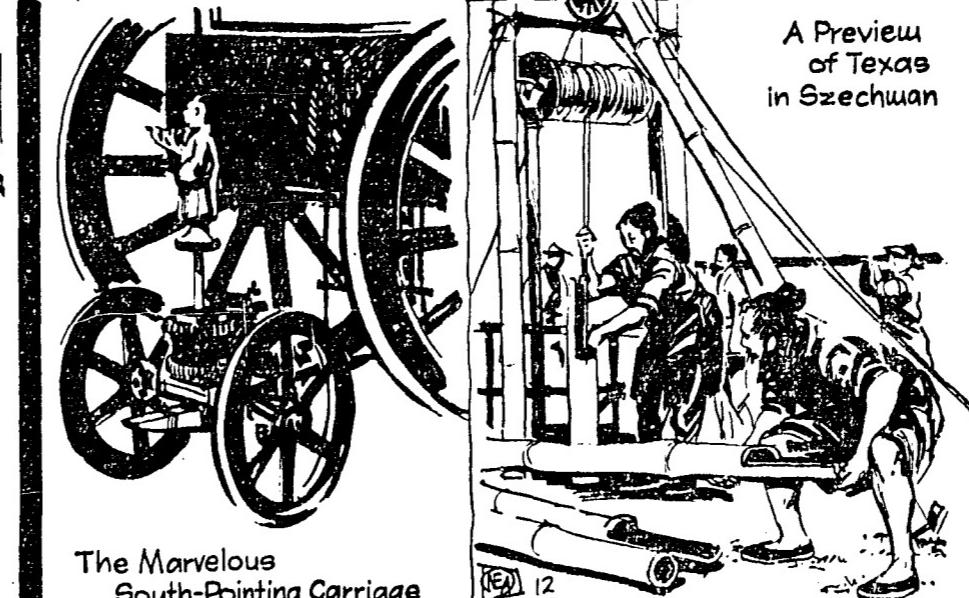

If the ancient time of the sage-kings was China's Golden Age in legend, the T'ang dynasty (618-906) was such in fact.

The barbarians were subdued and Chinese sovereignty was acknowledged from Korea to the gates of India. In power and extent, in population and culture, no contemporary civilization would compare with the T'ang.

By 755 the population was more than 53 million. To the capital of Ch'angan came merchants and envoys from all over the known world. In culture, the greatest flowering of the T'ang was in poetry and painting.

In religion, Buddhism reached its apex,

The Marvelous
South-Pointing Carriage

though the pessimistic teachings of the Gautama had been greatly modified by the basically optimistic Chinese. In reply to the challenge of Buddhism, the native Taoism, which had degenerated into a cult of alchemists and magicians, enjoyed a "counterreformation."

But as Buddhism declined, Confucianism gained, particularly as the basis for the civil service examinations. Under later T'ang emperors, Buddhists were persecuted.

Other religions — Mohammedanism, Zoroastrianism, Nestorian Christianity — also entered, but none had Buddhism's success.

It was during the T'ang that the first book, a Buddhist text, was printed with wood blocks. This invention, together with such things as gunpowder and the compass, are familiar to the West, but the extent of Chinese inventive genius is not generally appreciated.

Among their innovations was a "south-pointing carriage," a form of compass that worked by a system of gears; and deep-drilling techniques for extracting natural gas and brine both dating back to Han times. Another was the simple foot stirrup.

According to Prof. Joseph Needham, the authority on Chinese science, if gunpowder shattered European feudalism with its castles and knights in armor, it was the foot stirrup that had made it possible in the first place.

The relentless cycle of dynasty — proceeding from the vigor of youth to the corruption of old age — eventually overtook the T'ang. Following the last weak emperor came a half-century of contest between rival families — a period noted for the beginning of the custom of binding women's feet. Finally, in 960, a new dynasty — the Sung — gained the "Mandate of Heaven."

Says Solons No Longer Souused By Noon Daily

By EDMOND LEBRETON
PHILADELPHIA (AP)—

"The day is past when legislators may keep a fifth in their lockers and be souused by noon each day."

The speaker was a member of a state legislature, Rep. Harry B. Colay of Magnolia, Ark., addressing the Board of Directors of the fledgling National Society of State Legislators.

In a country where almost every interest has incorporated a national organization, state legislators went their separate ways until mid-1965, when a society was set up by 22 of them. They had been discussing what they saw as the decline of state government and the low opinion in which legislators were held.

The society now claims a membership of something over 300, out of a potential of some 8,000 members of legislatures. It has a headquarters in Glenview, Ill., and an ambitious program to build up both the prestige and the effectiveness of state lawmakers.

Democrat Colay is president-elect of the society, named to succeed its first president, Republican Rep. William L. Blaser of Park Forest, Ill.

Entitling his statement for the directors' meeting "the importance of our image in the preservation of state sovereignty," he told the gathering:

"No legislature in this day and age ever convenes without the ever present press, with its news services, the TV cameras and the radio mikes," Colay said.

"It is much more important that we conduct ourselves with proper decorum and decent appearance, than it was in the days when news did not travel so swiftly."

Along with "public understanding and acceptance of the legislator and the legislative process, the society lists as objectives exchange of information to make lawmaking more efficient, and defining and supporting responsibilities and professional standards—as well as "adequate legislator compensation, staffing and working facilities."

Colay told a reporter he thinks state government is in a decline and that "the growing use of federal grants in aid has been a very deciding factor in this decline."

"However," he said, "I do not feel that such a decline is irreversible, but that it can and must be halted. And I do feel that much of it has been the fault of the states in allowing such needs to exist that many of such aids became necessary."

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Howard Johnson of Chandlerville. She wore a floor length gown of white satin and lace with chiffon. Her blusher veil of illusion was attached to a halo of net. She carried her mother's white Bible, overlaid with white satin and two baby orchids.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Griffin of Havana, aunt and uncle of the groom, attended the couple. Mrs. Griffin wore poudre blue and carried a nosegay of white carnations and red roses.

The groom's mother wore a black and white figured dress with white accessories. Her flowers were red carnations.

The bride is the daughter of the late Jesse and Nerice Nichelson of Hannibal, Missouri. She has made her home with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Johnson of Chandlerville. She is a member of the 1966 graduating class at Chandlerville High School.

The groom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Davies of Chandlerville, graduated from the local high school in 1963. He was employed at Allis Chalmers in Springfield until enlisting in the U.S. Air Force in November. He has been stationed in Texas since his enlistment and arrived home April 6th for a 30 day leave prior to being sent to Iceland to specialize in jet mechanics.

Surprised Mr. Taxpayer?

Making Ends Meet Tough For Solons

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP) — It may come as a surprise to Joe taxpayer that the cost of senatorial living is so high that many members can't make ends meet on their $30,000 yearly salary.

To Joe, who may not have reached even the $10,000 bracket, this could be a confirmation of his suspicions that his elected representatives are mixed up in a lot of the high living he is pretty sure goes on in Washington.

But senators — including some who are pretty good at doing the frug — say it isn't so. They contend the money goes for such homey things as entertaining constituents, making numerous trips back to inform the voters and getting away from their burdens for a few days in the sun.

A cross-section check of members — none of whom wanted to be named publicly — turned up indications that a relatively small number get by on what remains of their salaries after state and federal taxes and pension deductions.

The whole matter was brought to public attention by the contention of associates that the expense of public office costs Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., from $15,000 to $20,000 more than his $30,000 salary.

This was advanced in connection with the claim that between $100,000 and $200,000 raised at testimonial dinners for Dodd represented tax-free gifts. The Senate Ethics Committee has Dodd's situation under investigation.

A New England Republican who has been around a long time said he lives within his $30,000 salary and manages to save about $2,000 a year. But he said he could see where other senators more attracted to the Washington and home state social whirls than he could spend $50,000.

A Democrat from the Southwest, who doesn't live within his salary because he doesn't have to, said that entertaining the home folk is a big item. He said he has never charged it off his income tax because he doesn't regard it as a legitimate deduction.

A border state Republican, who concedes he doesn't live on his $30,000 salary, said he could if he had to. But he said it wouldn't be difficult for a senator to spend as much as $50,000 "without even having a liveried butler."

He said he has never had to spend any of his own money on his campaigns, since he was able to get financial support from fund-raising committees. But he said this isn't necessarily true of all candidates.

A Midwestern Democrat said he has been having so much difficulty financing family living on $30,000 he sold his home in his state and is using the money to finance a son's college education.

GM Admits 3rd Flaw

Recall Few Corvairs, Many Olds

By CHARLES C. CAIN
AP Business News Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Chevrolet confirmed Saturday it had made some adjustments in Corvairs "to improve driveability," but insisted no safety factor was involved.

This came within 24 hours of GM disclosure that adjustments had been made on 2,600 of its Oldsmobile Toronados, a new car on the market this year, and on about 23,000 of the 1964 Cadillacs.

A Chevrolet spokesman said

Corvair changes involved "only a few cars" and a bracket, which he described as "not compulsory," to change slightly the pivot point of the front strut rod of the rear suspension. He added:

"It is a production design change which improves driveability and is not considered a safety item."

The spokesman also insisted the bracket was not a rear wheel bracket as one complaining driver had reported.

Begin Listing Mistakes

GM's disclosures came as all four auto companies were at work compiling a requested list of all general defects found in their cars since 1960.

The request was made by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., whose subcommittee has been probing the auto safety field for over two years.

On the Toronado, a spokesman for Oldsmobile said an automatic wrench apparently had been set too tight and overtightened the six lug nuts which hold the wheel rim in place.

He said the condition had been discovered by Oldsmobile's own testing program and that about 91 per cent of the cars already had been called in for a minor modification which included loosening the nuts and resetting them to proper tension.

Cadillac said hood latches had been replaced on 23,000 of its 1964 cars after some reports that the hood latch had slipped, causing the hood to fly open.

Arouses Question

The 1966 Corvair steering problem came to light when Ron Barnes, 22, a member of the Youngstown, Ohio, Vindication staff, took his car back to an Ohio dealer and complained the car did not handle quite as he wanted.

Barnes said, and Chevrolet confirmed, that installation of a 62 cent rear wheel bracket on the car had resulted in elimination of the problem.

A Chevrolet spokesman confirmed that the low cost bracket had been installed on several of the 1966 Corvairs but said the number of cars involved and the technical value of the additional bracket had not been evaluated yet.

Foreign Policy Largest Task Of Legislators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The worry over Viet Nam is turning this into a foreign-policy Congress.

Whether the administration approves or not, Congress is showing increasing preoccupation with foreign affairs as it adds to the growing list of investigations, studies and hearings aimed at exploring—and influencing—American policy.

The issues range from Saigon black marketing and dust-dry treaties to the blood-and-iron question of whether Uncle Sam carries a big enough stick to back up all his commitments.

Viet Nam is the catalyst, but the chain reaction is global—and sometimes overlapping.

As an emissary of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, flies to Europe this weekend for two weeks of spadework in advance of hearings on European problems, including the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson's Government Operations subcommittee on national security has started hearings on NATO with former Secretary of State Dean Acheson as lead-off witness.

His group will hear another former secretary of state, Christian A. Herter, next Thursday, and retired Gen. Lauris Norstad Friday. Norstad was supreme allied commander in Europe from 1956 to 1962.

Jackson, D-Wash., voiced hope his hearings will lead to a strengthening of the alliance and focus more attention on NATO problems.

A House Government Operations subcommittee plans to leave Friday for Viet Nam.

"The subcommittee," said chairman John E. Moss, D-Calif., "will examine apparent serious management problems of the aid program there and will look into control problems which include diversions of food and medical supplies, black marketing of U.S.-aid goods, currency manipulations, irregularities in the commodity import program, diversion of goods from the military post exchange, and a harbor tieup in Saigon."

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, under Chairman J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., is still grappling with the foreign aid authorization bill.

It plans to hear Lincoln Gordon, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, Monday, and Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Aid Director David Bell Tuesday.

Fulbright has contended that it was a "modest aid program" that led to the U.S. involvement in Viet Nam. In a previous trip before the committee April 18, Rusk said it wasn't aid that led to such entanglements. But he pointed out that formal agreements commit the United States to come to the defense of some 40 countries in case of aggression.

Question: Are bumpers intended to serve a useful purpose, or are they for design only?

Answer: That's a good point, but I'm not a designer."

Question: I have a hard time finding the horn in many cars. Sometimes it's a button, on others the horn ring is on top of the wheel, others it's below, sometimes it's all the way around. Why doesn't Detroit standardize the horn?

Answer: If you treated a car as though you were a pilot of an airplane, you would check out the vehicle before you drove it.

During the panel discussion, which also included an "assistant to the assistant commissioner of the government Standards and Quality Control, General Services Administration, debate centered around tires and d tires."

Tire Complaints Bunk

James E. Corey, manager, field engineering, Firestone, defended two-ply tires, and refuted charges about complaints that tire companies equip cars with tires too small.

Corey said that it was the auto manufacturer who purchased the tires, and that the tire industry only filled the orders.

He commented that the tires on '63 models were not undersized, and that they had been tested, and proven adequate to stand the weight loads.

Corey also related that the tire industry would, within the next year supply the public, through dealers, with information on tire size, air pressures etc. are the best for various models.

On the subject of non-skid brakes, Louis Lundstrom, director, automotive safety, General Motors, contended that many new devices have been tested, but turned down.

"We're all working year-by-year to improve brakes of the future, and the coefficient between the tire surface and the road."

Rodhouse News

Mrs. A. M. Harber, who resides in Lomita, Calif., has written to her former home town of Rodhouse requesting stock in the Rodhouse Centennial Corporation. Mrs. Harber is the former Goldie Hatfield, and her family was one of the older families of the community.

AUTO SAFETY ENGINEERS — Three automotive safety engineers, and a tire safety expert, were on the firing line Friday in Highland Park at the 9th annual Illinois Editors Traffic Safety seminar. Seen, l-r, are James E. Corey, Firestone; Louis Lundstrom, General Motors; Ellis Danner, University of Illinois; Walter F. Roberts, assistant, GSA; Roy Haesler, Chrysler, and L. H. Nagler, American Motors.

Public Squeals, Detroit Squirms

When the wealthiest kid on the block gets caught in the act of mischief, the neighborhood squeals with delight.

Today, that's happening to the auto industry.

Three auto safety engineers, representing General Motors, Chrysler, and American Motors, and a tire engineer from Firestone, faced the 9th Annual Editors Traffic Safety Seminar, held in Highland Park.

All four contended that drivers cause accidents, not cars, and that 40 per cent of all fatal accidents involve drunk drivers.

Newspaper representatives had been informed that the four would be available for questions following the close of the panel discussion.

Walter R. Roberts of GSA contended that all jet airliners, including military planes, have used non-skid brakes for years.

Roy Haesler, chief engineer of automotive safety, Chrysler Corporation, said that the unit production cost of non-skid brakes was too prohibitive.

"You can have the best brakes in the world, and they won't cost an additional $100 if you just pump the brakes. It's not a matter of stopping the car sooner, but controlling the car in the stopping distance that is important," he contended.

New Safety Features

Several new safety devices, which are expected to be included on next year's models, will include a steering wheel which will collapse upon severe crushing impact, a dual brake system, and shoulder straps to supplement "lap" belts.

Nagler said that the industry was unaware that the buying public wanted so many safety features.

"For years we have been supervising the cars with these devices when they become available through testing, but I guess we haven't blown our own horn loud enough when they've been introduced," he commented.

During the questioning, the point was raised of whether the industry might be at fault pushing bigger and faster power plants.

Caveat Emptor

"Car sales during the past three years, and especially 1965, have risen to all-time highs. We assumed these models were in demand, so we answered them," Lundstrom retorted.

During conversation with Nagler, he related his first meeting with Ralph Nader, tiger on the back of the auto industry, whose book, "Unsafe at Any Speed" has prompted government questions on the car manufacturers.

I was asked to fill in a Windsor, Ontario, television panel show discussing the auto industry. I met Nader only two minutes before airtime and we exchanged comments.

"During the hour and one half show he asked questions about the Corvair, and the industry in general. That was in October, and two months later, after his book was published, the show was produced for viewing for first time.

"It had been cut down to about ten minutes, and my answers re-worked. He came out looking like Sir Galahad, and I was the dragon."

Primaries

The only statewide contests in New Mexico's primary are those for the Democratic and Republican nominations for governor. Democratic Sen. Clinton P. Anderson has no opposition for renomination, and Anderson Carter of Lovington is unopposed for the Republican senatorial nomination. Carter is a former Democratic legislative leader who switched to the GOP and supported Republican presidential candidate Barry Goldwater two years ago.

Democratic Gov. Jack M. Campbell is ineligible for re-election. He is supporting T.E. (Gene) Lusk, party leader in the State Senate, for the nomination in a contest with John Burroughs, a former governor. Bidding for the Republican nomination are David Cargo and Clifford Hawley, both state representatives.

In Oklahoma, where Democratic feuds helped Republican Henry Bellmon win the governorship four years ago, there are 13 candidates or the Democratic nomination for governor. Bellmon is ineligible for another term and three candidates seek the Republican nomination.

Democratic Sen. Fred R. Harris, who defeated Bud Wilkinson, the famed former University of Oklahoma football coach, two years ago, has two challengers for renomination.

Challenging Harris for the Democratic nomination are Willard R. Owens, a farmer of Muldrow, and Billy E. Brown, an Oklahoma City construction man.

Seeking the Republican senatorial nomination are Gustav K. Brandborg of Tulsa, Don Kinard, an Oklahoma City oil man, and Pat J. Patterson, an Oklahoma City attorney.

Raymond Gary, oilman-rancher who was governor in 1954-55, is one of the 13 candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor. The general expectation among political analysts is that Gary will be one of two men going into a runoff primary May 24.

The other contenders include David Hall, Tulsa County attorney; State Atty. Gen. Charles Nesbitt; Leland Gourley, president of an Oklahoma City bank and publisher of a newspaper at Henryetta; Preston Moore, former national commander of the American Legion and Cleeth John Rogers, an Oklahoma City attorney and state senator. Also running: Keith Cartwright, Henry W. Ford, Jack K. Gillespie, Howard W. Joplin, Al J. Kavanaugh and Carmen Mae Marcus.

Contenders for the Republican nomination are Dewey Bartlett, a Tulsa oil man and state senator; John N. Happy Camp, a Waukomis banker and former state representative, and Bruno H. Miller, an Oklahoma City attorney.

The result was a decline in Central and Pennsy as well as in Great Northern and Northern Pacific, whose proposed merger was turned down by the Dow Jones industrial average last week fell 16.15 to 933.68.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined 7.6 to 343.8, its worst loss since the week ended June 26 when it lost 9.8.

Of 1,584 issues traded last week, 943 fell and 460 rose.

The bond market continued its downward trend in what some analysts termed a leveling off period.

The Treasury took no one by surprise when it announced the refunding of $9.3 billion notes due to mature May 15 with a return of 3.34 per cent to 4 per cent.

A $18 million offering by the Potomac Edison Co., priced to return 5.70 per cent, was sold out in one day.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week took its worst weekly loss in 10 months and on the lightest trading in six weeks.

Some unsettling news was linked with the decline. Also important was that on Monday the American and New York stock exchanges put into effect tighter credit restrictions on small-time speculators and in-and-out traders.

Wall Streeters agreed that this was the chief reason for the reduction in volume. They recalled that only two weeks ago the New York Stock Exchange rolled up the biggest weekly volume in its history — $3.5 million shares. Last week volume declined to $38,353,000 shares from 46.7 million the week before.

Many glamor stocks paused for breath. Blue Chips, as a whole, performed even worse than they usually do.

General Motors sank to 88 1/2, its lowest price since mid-1964 before recovering to end the week at 90 1/4, a net loss of 3%. GM was upset by news of an antitrust suit charging the giant automaker with trying to ban the sale of Chevrolets through discount houses in the Los Angeles area.

The Interstate Commerce Commission came out with decisions on outstanding rail merger cases. Although the decision favored the merger of New York Central and Pennsylvania Railroad, the conditions attached to the merger were such as to give analysts and investors pause.

The result was a decline in Central and Pennsy as well as in Great Northern and Northern Pacific, whose proposed merger was turned down by the Dow Jones industrial average last week fell 16.15 to 933.68.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined 7.6 to 343.8, its worst loss since the week ended June 26 when it lost 9.8.

WLDS Observes National Radio Month In May

RADIO Station WLDS today announced it will join more than 3,000 other U.S. radio stations in observing National Radio Month, May 1-31.

The annual, month-long event is designed to acquaint the public at local stations throughout the country with the many and varied services radio provides. It is sponsored by WLDS and other radio station and network members of the National Association of Broadcasters.

The theme selected for the 1966 observance is "Radio—America's Sound Habit." Tuneful musical announcements based on the slogan will be aired by WLDS throughout the month.

The talks in London involved defense ministers and military leaders from the United States, Britain, West Germany, Italy and Turkey.

It was the second meeting of NATO's Working Group for Nuclear Planning.

The objective of this group is to develop means for improving allied participation in the planning for possible use of nuclear weapons and in machinery for consultation within the 15-national alliance in event of Red attack.

The club's share-the-fun meeting will be held June 1.

The next meeting is scheduled May 5 at the home of Marsha Gabhart.

Claimed Proposals:

Some published reports said McNamara had proposed that plans be drawn for automatic use of nuclear weapons in three situations:

— The laying of nuclear land mines to block invasion.

— Use of atomic antiaircraft weapons in event of attack on NATO territory.

— The firing of atomic depth charges and other antisubmarine weapons in event of Communist assault on NATO ports or naval elements.

Sources said that these three possible uses of atomic weapons had been discussed as part of a general review at NATO nuclear capability.

But the sources, in parallel with the official Pentagon statement, denied there was any U.S. proposal for automatic employment of any of these three types of nuclear defenses.

It is understood that the Turkish representatives brought up the question of stringing atomic demolition charges along the defensive perimeter.

The United States has atomic-mine charges stored at various places in Western Europe but has not spread them out as the Turks proposed. The Germans also have been inclined to the idea of an atomic-mine barrier along the Iron Curtain.

FOLLOWING ARREST

CENTRAL ISLIP, N.Y. (AP)

— A Negro mob attacked two white policemen and wounded one with his own gun early Saturday in a melee that followed the arrest of a Negro motorist for speeding.

It took place in the predominantly Negro Carleton Park section of this central Long Island community 40 miles east of New York City, but Suffolk County police said it was an isolated incident.

"There were no racial overtones at all," said Lt. James Kelly, duty officer at police headquarters at Hauppauge. He said there had been no further trouble in the neighborhood Saturday.

Police said Patrolman Edwin Michel, 24, of Islip, was shot three times in the leg after the crowd of 30 to 40 men and women took away his pistol.

The second officer, Patrolman George Forrester, also had his service revolver taken away, but he drove the mob away with a derringer he had concealed in his jacket, police said.

The reorganization meeting of the Greenfield Board of Education was held Thursday evening in the District School office.

Russell E. Finney Jr., was seated as a new member of the board to serve a three year term and Charles Ross Jr., entered his second full term. Mr. Finney succeeds Mr. Richard Scott.

The first order of business for the newly constituted board was the election of officers and the following were elected for a one-year term: President, Frances E. Steckel; president pro tem, Ebert Ferguson, and secretary, Mrs. Louis Lee Ford.

Board meetings for the new year were set for the second and third Thursday of each month.

Paul George and Mike Knisley, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Knisley, were among a large group of scouts receiving the Ad Altare Dei award Sunday in Springfield. They met with other recipients at the Cathedral Grade school with the Rev. John McGarrett. The ceremonies were held in the cathedral. Ceremonies were also held at the tomb of Abraham Lincoln.

The Ad Altare Dei Award is a recognition that the Catholic Church gives to the scout for advancement in the spiritual content of the program. The award does not in any way take the place of any scout awards, but aids scouting by helping the scout live his oath and law.

The award is made on the authority of the ordinary or bishop of each diocese through the diocesan scout committee.

The junior club received recognition for being a 100 percent club and were awarded third place for their entry in the 20th District press book competition. The senior club received music certificate.

The state convention will be held in Chicago this week. Mrs. Tom Dineen, Mrs. Sinclair Savage and Mrs. E. Y. Johnson are planning to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jones of Middletown, Ohio, visited Mrs. Fred Jokisch Thursday afternoon. They are also visiting relatives in Bluffton, Spring in route home after spending the winter in Arizona.

Police said the girl checked into the hotel New Yorker, 34th street and Eighth avenue, early this morning after her arrival at Kennedy Airport from Europe where she had attended school.

Her body was discovered by a hotel maid on a fifth floor roof of a set-back.

She was described by police as "an attractive blonde."

4-H Club Activities

CHANDLERVILLE — The regular meeting of the Pontiac Peppermates 4-H club was held at the home of Mrs. Keith Bottemus Thursday. The meeting opened with the pledge to the flag led by Marsha Gabhart.

A talk was presented by Lois Hish, who later cooperated with Marsha Gabhart in preparing a demonstration.

The club's share-the-fun meeting will be held June 1.

The next meeting is scheduled May 5 at the home of Marsha Gabhart.

Members of the Woodson Willing Workers 4-H club met recently at the home of Debbie Suttles. Carol Irlam presided during the business session.

Demonstrations were given by Debbie Chalcraft, Sharon West and Carol Irlam with talks presented by Debbie Suttles and Veronica Struble. Barbara Henry led the pledge to the flag and the 4-H pledge was led by Sharon West.

Members plan to participate in the Cancer Crusade, serving as volunteer workers in Woodson.

Attending the meeting as guests were Mrs. Eugene West and Carol Irlam with Capt. Lawrence H. Goldberg, 33, of Duluth, Minn., and 1st Lt. Gerald D. Hardgrave, 28, of Jackson, Tenn. Goldberg said the MIG had disintegrated under a hit by a heat-seeking sidewinder missile fired from their Phantom.

Other Phantoms accounted for two of the enemy planes Friday while guarding U.S. Air Force F105 fighter-bombers attacking a railroad yard. This action developed 35 miles north of Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital that American airmen are now calling "Dodge City" because of numerous shoot-outs in that area.

A Phantom crew used a sidewinder to shoot down one of four MIG17s which attacked their flight.

Capt. William D. Dowell, 34, of Tampa, Fla., the aircraft commander, said: "The missile struck the tail section of the MIG. The pilot ejected. The MIG trailed white smoke for two miles before hitting the ground and exploding."

In the other action, Capt. Larry R. Keith, 30, of Peoria, Ill., leader of the four-plane Phantom flight, and his crewman, 1st Lt. Robert A. Bleakley, 26, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, were credited with a kill.

A U.S. spokesman said enemy sea traffic had increased considerably in the past week — probably because of the continued pounding of North Vietnamese supply routes — and Navy fliers hit junks and sampans as night priority targets

PICKING UP
LOOSE ENDS

Our candidate for the most embarrassed track coach in the state Saturday: JHS mentor Al Rosenberger. In Rosey's own words, "I competed in track for 15 years and have coached the sport for 14 years, and in all that time nothing transpired like what happened this morning."

"We left Saturday morning at 6:50 a.m. and arrived at Delavan at 8:35. We are usually among the first to arrive, but this morning we were the very first and, in fact, the only team to arrive because the Delavan Track Carnival is to be held Saturday, May 7. One of the custodians met our bus at the lot and confirmed my growing suspicion that something was wrong."

"I have always heard and read about those things happening with other teams and coaches and wondered how anyone could make such an error. Well, now I know it isn't too difficult. I found out later that I had put the wrong date when making out the schedule last year. I regretted the incident and apologized to the kids and Coach Dan Moy, but someone said from the back of the bus, 'Forget it coach, it will give us something to remember 30 years from now!'"

Recent item in SPORTS ILLUSTRATED reads: "James Howard, Niagara Falls, N.Y., who gained a decision over defending champion Richard Pettigrew, the Navy's all-service titleholder, in the heavyweight semifinals, outpointed Ken Norton of Camp LeJeune, in the finals to take the AAU Heavyweight Championship in High Point, N.C."

Norton is the former JHS all-around athlete who took up boxing in the Marines, and, as far as we know, this was his first loss since taking up the sport. We also understand he will try for a spot in the 1968 Olympics. Norton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Norton, report he will be home on leave soon before leaving for Viet Nam.

While getting a haircut and a bowling lesson for the price of the former last week, we were informed that Mark's Barber Shop holds claim to a bit of a rarity concerning the local bowling scene. Teams sponsored by the establishment won both the Town and Country League on Wednesday, and the Topper League on Tuesday. Members of the winning Wednesday team were Stan Willner, Willie Markillie, Sonny Campbell, Monte Crowder and Rich Dixon. On the other were Mark Markillie, Harry Gillispie, Willie Markillie, Jess Meado and Russ Mosley.

Our memory does not recall when so many local and area athletic contests were rained out as has been this Spring. All local outfitts have had their schedules cut way short by the sporadic weather, that Saturday wiped out three baseball twinbills, one track meet and a pair of tennis matches. The Grade School District was also postponed until this Thursday, only two days before the Sectional, both to be held at the JHS field.

Cold and rain have always been major threats to Spring sports, not only because of postponements, but also because of the fact that cold weather presents a danger of an athlete injuring and pulling muscles.

HERE 'N' THERE: Drexelites tell us that Bill McClelland's run of ten in three-cushion billiards last week is the longest in memory at the local billiard establishment. Even touring pros who frequently put on exhibitions there have never run that many, according to several who should know.

When Jacksonville High school's track team won a first in all 17 events in a meet last week, coach Al Rosenberger commented that he believed that was the first time since he began coaching the sport 14 years ago.

Calhoun High school is looking for a football game for the second week of the season next year, and also needs a basketball game to complete the 1966-67 season. A two-year, home and away contract is desired. Any school interested may contact athletic director Francis A. Strauch at the school.

Cup Playoffs
On TV Today

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Red Wings display their talents before national television audience again Sunday and this may mean trouble for the visiting Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Red Wings are undefeated in three previous televised playoff games this season. The fourth game in the show down series comes up Sunday with Detroit holding a 2-1 edge in the game.

best-of-7 series.
The game begins at 2:30 p.m., EDT.

Detroit won two Sunday games on its way to eliminating the Chicago Black Hawks in six games in the semifinals.

Southern Dominates

Southern University dominated the college division, sweeping all but two of the six events.

Texas Southern took the college 440, breaking the Drake record for the second successive day with a 40.2 clocking.

In the year, the national television audience will be deprived of one of the exciting features of the playoffs — the deciding game.

Cepeda And Bolin
Allow 6-1 SF Edge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Orlando Cepeda's two-run homer and the six-hit pitching of Bob Bolin carried the San Francisco Giants to a 6-1 victory over St. Louis Saturday. Willie Mays again failed to hit home No. 512 in his bid to break Mel Ott's National League record for career homers, but he slammed a third-inning double and rode home on Cepeda's shot. That turned out to be enough for Bolin, who allowed only an unearned run in bringing his record to 3-2. A crowd of 40,607, thousands of them youngsters who received free baseball bats, watched Mays' bid for the elusive record. He equalled Ott's record last Sunday.

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Curt Flood of the St. Louis Cardinals has spent most of his major league career playing the same position as Willie Mays.

Therefore, Curt Flood could be pardoned for feeling slightly bitter if he felt any bitterness.

"Being second to Willie Mays," Flood said, "How can that bother someone? Being second to him is quite a compliment because he certainly is one of the greatest athletes of the decade."

It's amazing how he keeps that pace up because he has so many outside pressures. I know I resist as many outside things as possible because I feel baseball demands all your time and concentration."

The pressure on Willie Mays grows each season, but Willie's batting average, his home runs and his RBIs grow proportionately.

Local Teams Hit
By Wet Weather

Rain and wet grounds Saturday forced a flurry of postponements and cancellations in athletic contests involving local teams.

The Jacksonville at Decatur Eisenhower Capitol Conference baseball doubleheader set for Saturday was postponed, and will be rescheduled after both teams are eliminated from tournament play. The game was rained off Saturday total to eight this season.

The Rose Poly at IC baseball twin bill in baseball and tennis match, called because of an accident which took the lives of the wives of the Rose president, dean and business manager, have both been rescheduled for May. Both are Prairie College Conference dates.

The Illinois College and Illinois Wesleyan at Greenville Stepping Stone Purse at Churchill Downs, one of the last prepars for the May 7 classic.

Old Bag came through on the rail Saturday to whip three Kentucky Derby hopefuls in the $6,000 Stepping Stone Purse at Churchill Downs, one of the last prepars for the May 7 classic.

Old Bag, ineligible for the Derby, nipped Mary D. Kiern's Sean E. Indian by one length. Padgett and Grant's Blue Skyer was another three-quarters behind.

Sean E. Indian, Blue Skyer and Clear Springs Stable's Beau Bruner, in the five-horse field, are eligible for the $125,000-added Derby.

Sean E. Indian and Blue Skyer may have earned Derby starts but the poor finish by Beau Bruner all but ruled him out of the Derby.

Sean E. Indian, with Earlie Fires in the saddle, set the early pace while Old Bag, on the rail, and Blue Skyer, on the outside, challenged in the final quarter of a mile.

Old Bag, ridden by Willie Shoemaker and owned by P. R. Schleicher and S. M. Rieser, was timed in 1:25 1-5 for the seven furlongs over a sloppy track.

The winner returned $11.40, $4.20 and $2.40. Sean E. Indian paid $3.20 and $2.20. Blue Skyer, the favorite, paid $2.20.

Angels Score 12 In 8th For 16-9 Win

BOSTON (AP)—Rick Reichardt hit two homers, driving in four runs, and Jim Fregosi ripped a three-run double as the California Angels exploded for 12 runs in the eighth inning and whipped Boston 16-9 Saturday.

Reichardt, who received an estimated $175,000 bonus to sign with the Angels, tied the major league record for two homers in an inning, becoming the 11th player to accomplish the feat. The last to do it was Joe Pepitone on the New York Yankees in 1962.

The inning, the biggest in the majors this season, wiped out a 9-3 Red Sox lead and was built against starter Earl Wilson and relievers Ken Sanders, Dick Radatz and Dan Osinski.

The Angels, held to two hits for seven innings, collected 11 in the eighth, including Reichardt's blast and a two-run shot by Bobby Knoop.

Reichardt, Knoop, Fregosi and Joe Adcock each had a pair of hits as California sent 15 men to the plate.

Florida A&M, Villanova Share Relay Honors

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Villanova led by power-striding Dave Patrick, and Florida A&M's spring flashes, shared the major honors in the Penn Relays Saturday by capturing two of the relay championships in miserable weather at Franklin Field.

A crowd of 24,252 watched in the cold and rain as Patrick unseated another come-from-behind anchor leg to pace Villanova's quartet of sophomores to a two-yard victory over Georgetown in the two-mile relay in 7:39.3, and Florida A&M swept the 440 yards and 880 yards relays Saturday.

The other winners of the eight premier relays of the meet which drew 6,000 track and field athletes were Kentucky State in the college mile sprint medley in 3:24.5, Tennessee, 480-yard shuttle hurdle relay, 59.5; Georgetown, four-mile relay 17:06.3, and Maryland State by five yards over Morgan State in the one-mile relay.

Score First Wins

It was the first relay victories here for Tennessee and Florida A&M. The Floridians broke the ice in the quarter-mile with a two-yard edge over Morgan State in 41.6. Then they finished second to Maryland State in the half-mile but were awarded first when the Marylanders were disqualified for passing too soon on the exchange between the second and third men. Florida A&M's time was 1:26.9.

Villanova, trailing badly after two legs of the four mile relay, pulled out at the start of the third mile to save Ian Hamilton and Patrick for the two-mile relay later.

It paid off for the Wildcats, who had copped the distance medley relay Friday on Patrick's sizzling 4:04.6 anchor mile.

Jumbo Elliott's Wildcats, winners of at least one relay for the last 12 years, now have copped 27 in 12 years. Villanova, which has dominated the meet for the last 10 years, wasn't expected to do much this year following the wholesale graduation of its star-studded 1965 team.

Patrick was named the meet's outstanding athlete.

Only two meet records were bettered in the two days because of the weather.

Friday Villanova fractured the distance medley record by 7.5 seconds. Saturday, Sam Bair, Jr., of Kent State of Ohio took the college two mile run in 8:49.2, beating the mark of 8:53.6 set by Bill Straub of Army two years ago.

The stocking plan called for each team to exempt seven players from its regular season roster. Only the names of the players selected were made public. Because of the varying number of players to the club rosters, ranging from 10 to 12, the total list of available players from the Eastern teams was 21.

Although Baltimore played in the West this year, it will be in the Eastern Division next season and thus was listed as an Eastern member. There will be 18 men available from the Western teams from which the Bulls can take eight.

In addition to Bowman, a 6-foot-10 center from Wichita State who suffered a broken ankle in training camp and never played a game, the Bulls also took Tom Thacker from Cincinnati. Kerr and Sloan were the picks from Baltimore.

Two From Celts

The champion Celtics gave up John Thompson and Ron Bonham, both players with limited experience, and the New York Knicks lost Barry Clemens and Len Chappell.

Klein said he was happy to get Gerry Ward and Bianchi from Philadelphia. He said if Bianchi retired, as he had rumored, he could fit into the organization in some other capacity. Klein said he knew there were no rebates or substitutions in case of retirements.

The 1966-67 schedule will call for 81 games, an increase on the 72-game schedule this year that ran for six months and 13 days before the final playoff game was over Thursday night.

WIN CENTRALIA MEET

CENTRALIA, Ill. (AP)—East St. Louis easily won top honors Saturday in Centralia High School's Invitational track and field meet, the first in what is to become an annual relays meeting.

Wild 9th Inning Allows Houston To Nip Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP)—A third strike passed ball by catcher Gene Oliver, a hit batsman and John Bateman's run-scoring single in the ninth inning gave the Houston Astros a 5-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday night.

Atlanta reliever Phil Niekro struck out Rusty Staub, leading off the ninth, but the ball eluded Oliver who had replaced Joe Torre behind the plate at the start of the inning, and Staub reached first base.

One out later, Hank Fisher replaced Niekro and hit Dave Nicholson with a pitch. Bateman then singled to left, scoring Staub, to snap a 4-4 tie.

The Braves had scored two runs in the eighth, tying the game, on Torre's single, a triple by Rico Carty and a pinch single by Oliver.

Recalls Happy Times With Playwright Ade

BEARDSTOWN — A Beards town man has some happy recollections and vivid memories of his associations with one of the world's most renowned humorists and playwrights.

Field Allison Lyons, manager of the Continental Grain company here, knew the great author George Ade, was his companion and highly respected chauffeur and probably could write a book about the famous author.

Lyons is a native of Brook, Indiana and a graduate of Purdue University. As a child and later a boy in Brook, he often was one of many recipients of the largess of George Ade.

Lyons tells how Ade sponsored picnics for all the "kids" of Brook and nearby Kentland, and has some vivid recollections of accompanying Ade on lecture tours.

Not So In Chicago

"Roads in Indiana then were gravel and in Illinois they were mud" so we didn't take very long trips," Lyons relates, "but they were always most enjoyable with George Ade."

One of the most amusing stories recounted by Lyons in connection with his experiences with Ade had to do with a decision by the famous author to "sell" his brother, Joe, a 250-acre farm.

Joe, a character in his own right and a constant tobacco chewer, was called to the Ade estate and asked if he would like to own the 250-acre farm had been operating for George.

A deal was agreed on whereby Joe was to get the farm for $1.

Lyons was called in by Author Ade to "witness" the deal, and relates this incident:

"After the papers had been signed and Joe had taken a badly worn dollar bill from his purse and paid for the land George asked Joe if he had anything to say or any thoughts to express."

Brotherly Advice

"Yes I have" said Joe. "From now on stay off my farm."

George Ade's satire "Fables in Slang" won him nationwide recognition, and placed him in a class with the other greats who made Indiana's great heritage in literature — Theodore Dreiser, John T. McCutcheon, James Whitcomb Riley and Booth Tarkington.

Ade's lifespan was from 1866 to 1944. He wrote such admiring words as:

"Draw your salary before getting it."

"For parlor use the vague generality is a life saver" and also reported that:

"It's no time for mirth and laughter, the cold, gray dawn of the morning after."

Editorial Comment

Law Day, U.S.A.

Communists throughout the world are observing today, May 1, as a day to boast Communist might. As celebrated in Moscow, for example, it no doubt includes parades of war machines, mute evidence that the Soviets are out to bury the West, however much they talk of peaceful coexistence. But here in the U.S.A. May day has taken on a new meaning in recent years. We observe it as "Law Day, USA," or as "Loyalty Day."

Proclamations by President Johnson and Governor Kerner have asked observance of Law Day, and in many areas throughout the nation, and in some public celebrations, there will be appeals for a rededication to devotion and loyalty to the United States, and to the rule of law in the affairs of men and nations.

The contrast between our observance of May 1, and that of the Communists is sharp. Unhappily, our observance has not become as general and as impressive as it should be.

Citizens, however, can observe it individually by displaying flags, and by giving thought to the meaning of freedom under the rule of law.

Red observance of May 1 is almost mandatory, and it has the advantage of long tradition. While it seems that the Red May Day is especially the property of the Russians, actually it has been an international radical observance since 1899. It was launched in Paris by the Second International, organized by proletarian revolutionaries on the centennial of the fall of the Bastille, to supersede the First Internationale organized by Karl Marx in 1864.

American observance of May 1 as "Loyalty Day" was launched before its observance as "Law Day" but the latter now seems to take precedence in official recognition — as witnessed by the proclamations of the president and governors.

Our goal, one might add, is the same, whichever "day" one observes, for its object is to emphasize our duties as citizens, as well as our rights as citizens.

It seems sometimes that more are aware of our rights as citizens than of our duties. So perhaps it is well to emphasize those responsibilities we all must bear. They include:

The duty to obey the laws.

The duty to respect the rights of others.

The duty to inform yourself on issues of government and community welfare.

The duty to vote in elections.

The duty to serve on juries if called.

The duty to serve and defend your country.

The duty to assist agencies of law enforcement.

The duty to practice and teach the principles of good citizenship in your home.

These duties every American owes his nation. May 1 is a fine time to consider them solemnly and rededicate yourself to the life of freedom we live under the rule of law, in contrast to the rule of force that exists under communism.

Armchair Travel

The avid gardener eyeing the spring seed catalogues has nothing on the armchair tourist. As the travel ads blossom in the magazines and Sunday supplements in anticipation of the summer vacation season, the would-be wayfarer considers ports of call with the same care and enthusiasm exhibited by the gardener in choosing an addition to his rose bed.

Armchair travel is effortless. There are no lumpy beds nor questionable foods. The drinking water is consistent. The price is nil, and somebody else is carrying the camera equipment. Yet the view from an armchair is limited. More Americans each year discover this and clamber out of their comfortable niches onto ocean liners and airplanes to see the world.

They bring home with them much besides a series of colored pictures. They bring a renewed awareness that the world is people, not words in a travel brochure. Humans smile and wave or go hungry and weep, wherever they live, and the most breathtaking scenery doesn't change that fact.

The armchair traveler may day-dream if he likes, but we hope more and more of his breed will continue changing dreams into reality. Americans' growing taste for travel is making more than a few of them into perceptive citizens of the world.

Dad's Life Wrapped Up In Parents

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is 56 years old and he still calls his mother mommy and his father poppy.

We have a teenage daughter whom he ignores. I should add that he does not pay much attention to me, either. His whole life is wrapped up in his parents. He must see them every single day.

After 20 years I find myself resenting this mommy and poppy business. When we were married I thought he would outgrow it, but he seems to be getting more childish as time goes by.

Am I foolish to let this bother me? I will follow your advice.

—MIGRAINE MARTHA

Dear Migraine: Yes, you are foolish to let this bother you. It's a useless waste of energy. You are going to hear "mommy" and "poppy" as long as his parents live, so get used to it already.

How sad that your husband has no interest in his daughter! If she is in her teens and he ignores her, THAT won't change, either — until mommy and poppy are gone. Then he'll probably look to her for affection, but it will be too late.

Dear Ann Landers: Please inform the cello player's wife that her husband is going through the male menopause and that she is having an easier time of it than "I" had.

When my husband reached the foolish fifties he got himself a two-legged cello and they made beautiful music together.

I sat home night after night taking care of his sick mother.

Too bad some wives don't realize that men go through a period when they are not quite themselves. I hope the wife who wrote will give her husband a lot of love and understanding. I did, and it paid off. My husband appreciates me more than ever for standing by and patiently waiting for him to get through making a jackass out of himself. —R. C.

RESPECT THE LAW — IT RESPECTS YOU

Businessmen Are Squares When It Comes To Politics

By BRUCE BLOSSAT

Washington Correspondent

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Some

Republican professionals are bemoaning the fact the GOP wears the "business party" label but gets something less than full benefit from its ties with businessmen.

Basically, this is not a complaint over President Johnson's wooing of many business leaders to the pastures of consensus.

It is of longer standing, and yet it is also quite current.

In some measure it has to do with money. A good many businessmen's golden promises of campaign cash turn out to have a core of lead. Infuriated over the performance of some liberal

Democrat, they often talk a big game. But at collection time they reach for the petty cash drawer.

There is, however, a good deal more to the story. What really galls party professionals is the constant, widespread evidence that all too many businessmen, from the top down at least to middle echelons, lack any real grasp of what politics is all about.

One seasoned political figure comments:

"Their lack of political knowledge and sophistication is incredible . . . appalling."

Says another:

"Where politics is concerned, a lot of them are just plain dumb."

It is a little stunning for some politicians to hear high-paid business executives ask,

as some have done, how many

U.S. congressmen are up for re-election this year. All congressmen, of course, run every two years.

The gripes over businessmen's ignorance of politics come from all sectors of the party. In 1964, a key Goldwater lieutenant,

laboring hard for his boss, volunteered his staggering disappointment at the performance of business leaders linked with the campaign.

From the Republican party's broad center and its liberal wing, nevertheless, comes a steady fuming over the fact that so many businessmen see fit to contribute substantial sums to far right-wing causes like the John Birch Society.

The belief in professional circles is that some right-wing outfit would collapse in a month or two if their business angels deserted them financially. Party men regard such contributions as a grossly wasteful use of political dollars.

One Pennsylvania Republican

expressed it when he said businessmen's contributions to this stripe seem bent on "having one last go at abolishing Washington" before they turn in their suits.

Aside from the dollar waste, professionals view this tendency as wildly impractical and having no place in sensible national politics.

Among those businessmen who stay closer to the party reservation, many are being faulted for the unimaginative monotony of their ant government reactions.

Their sing - song utterances have nearly destroyed their credibility in the political-idea market place. The painstakingly prepared pronouncements of the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce get little attention

these days.

A few years ago, the growth of businessmen's courses in politics

Census Finds Illinois Farm Value Boosted 27% In Five Years

Illinois farms have increased in value to an average of $82,494 each on the basis of figures reported during the 1964 Census of Agriculture, the U.S. Department of Commerce's Bureau of the Census says. The new figure is 27 percent ($18,550) above the average valuation of Illinois farms compiled during the last previous farm census in 1959.

The figures are in the state summary report on the 1964 agriculture census just published by the Bureau.

The report also shows that sales of all products from Illinois farms amounted to $2.1 billion in 1964 — up from $1.8 billion in 1959. An increase of $324 million in sales of field crops other than vegetables and fruits and nuts accounted for the rise and compensated for a slight decline ($93 million in 1964 as against $1 billion in 1959) in sales of livestock and livestock products.

Corn production, particularly, showed an increase during the five years. Corn harvested for grain in 1964 totaled 728 million bushels with 650 million bushels in 1959. Corn sales increased from 369 million bushels in 1959 to 497 million bushels in 1964. These increases were accomplished in spite of a decline in corn acreage from 10 million in 1959 to 9.5 million acres in 1964.

Also More Hogs

Sales of hogs, also increased between censuses — from 10.6

LAW on the farm

NEW LAW ADDS TO DRAINAGE RIGHTS

By Norm Krausz
Our surface water laws are based on the law of gravity and what is called the rule of "natural" flow. That is, a lower landowner must accept surface water in natural channels; and he may not dam or obstruct the flow, causing the water to back up on his neighbor.

Now a new Illinois law passed in 1965 makes the restraint even tougher. It states that a landowner shall not wilfully or intentionally interfere with any ditches or natural drains in any way that causes them to become so obstructed as to materially impede the flow of water.

There are two exceptions — a landowner can do as he wishes with ditches and drains that are entirely on his own land, and he may construct artificial impoundments, even to the extent of temporarily interrupting the flow of water.

With a gentle slope, this could mean that only the kind of soil and water conservation measures that are generally approved would meet the test. Pounding the water excessively by artificial means or raising the level of the channel by filling in or plowing it into, may be a violation. Such activity could be construed as intentional interference with a ditch or drain.

With steeper slopes, this legal restriction is not generally so serious because the water usually flows away from an upper owner at a rapid rate. At least, any impedance or interference with water flow would usually not be "material," or sustained over a long period of time.

The law puts teeth into this new provision with criminal penalties. A violator is subject to a fine of $50 to $500 for each day that he wilfully and intentionally interferes with such drains in any way that materially impedes the flow of water. This fine is in addition to any civil damages that may be assessed for damages to crops, buildings, animals or other property.

Speaking of government's attempts to manage agriculture,

Food Cost Percentage Of Consumer Income Lowest Of All Time

Blaming farmers for inflation and the high cost of living is a case of the Johnson Administration's grabbing hold of the wrong handle.

That point is made by William J. Kuhfuss, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association, in an editorial in the current issue of the organization's magazine, IAA RECORD.

"No less a person than the President of the United States himself advised consumers not to buy the more expensive food products," Kuhfuss said.

"His statement, in effect, said that he was interested primarily in the price consumers pay for food, with very little regard for the welfare of the farmer. This is supposed to be in the interest of controlling inflation."

Goal Changed

The Farm Bureau leader said it was the original intent of the Agriculture Department to place the welfare of the American farmer first in its consideration.

"It seems evident now, however, that the Department of Agriculture has decided that the number of votes on America's farms is so small that it must now place its emphasis on representing the consumer."

This is the lowest percentage for food COSTS on record.

"Yet farmers are the culprits. Who could presume that food costs are the cause of inflation or that farmers are even getting fair treatment in our economy?"

Consumer Important

Pointing out the importance of the consumer, Kuhfuss said:

"The needs of the consumer will be better met in Palmyra Sunday, May 7, announces Oral Cooper, president of the Palmyra Area Civic Association in conjunction with Mayor Irving Tongate.

The eight one-story duplex units near the center of the town will be open for inspection in the afternoon and the program will begin at 2 p.m. The principal speaker will be Howard Bertsch, national administrator of the Farmers Home Administration.

FHA financed the project with a loan of $56,000.

Kuhfuss said: "The U.S. Department of Agriculture is more consumer and politically motivated than agriculturally concerned."

Coast Guard Rushes To Aid Men Injured While At Sea

BOSTON (AP) — It was a headwind, turbulent, wintry day on the Atlantic and Harry Ingram, 63, was at the helm of the fishing trawler Rush.

The trawler was 120 miles southeast of Cape Cod and Ingram was struggling against the wind.

"The boat went over on her side," Ingram said later, "and the sea fell on the pilot house and broke two windows. I got one of the windows right in the Ingram suffered a deep face cut, severing an artery. In the pounding seas, crewmen were unable to stop the bleeding.

It is a custom of the sea, and it is written in international agreements, that no call for help shall go unanswered. The master of a ship getting a distress call is bound to proceed with all speed."

When the call is for an injured or ill seaman or passenger, the U.S. Coast Guard, a computer in New York and a doctor in Boston are ready to answer.

A doctor is on duty 24 hours a day at the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital in Boston. Two or three times a month, sometimes more, doctors in a quiet hospital office here prescribe treatment to a patient somewhere on the heaving waters of the Atlantic.

The first call for help — it's called a medico message — came on the special frequency to the Boston Coast Guard a few minutes before 3 p.m. that January day. Immediately, and without explanation, this message was placed on a stretcher the first message. The stretcher, lashed to a raft, was put into a small Coast Guard boat and he was finally taken aboard the cutter Acushnet.

The trawler Rush, now dead in the frenzied seas, told the distant shore about their injured seaman:

"Pulse 45 every 60 seconds respiration temp normal cut located right side of head from right eye extending to the right ear amount of blood lost approximately 2 or little more (pints) bleeding now for 6 hours mild headache. Presently applying bandage to stop bleeding."

A Coast Guard officer, Lt. (J.G.) Leo D. Allen, 24, received the message on the 15th floor Search and Rescue Office in Boston's Custom House, high over Boston harbor. Allen picked up the phone and reached John Ratino, a 29-year-old physician at the Public Health Hospital.

Allen read the condition report to Dr. Ratino, took the instructions and this message went out:

"USPHS doctor advises quote wrap head with sterile bandage if possible and as firm as possible. Use pad dressing. Then wrap firm. Give man as much clear liquid by mouth as he can comfortably take. Continue this. Watch pulse and accurately as possible account for amount of lost blood. Advise. Unquote."

Another message, this time asking the Coast Guard computer in New York for a list of ships carrying a doctor which would be within 50 miles of the Rush during the next 24 hours. The disturbing answer, as recorded in the log: "Atlantic rescue advises negative doctor ship 100-mile radius."

An urgent "All ships message" is sent, one that sometimes brings help from Soviet fishing vessels. A Finnish vessel, the Finnhoso, has answered and has found the trawler, but the "high seas and strong winds" make transfer of the patient too hazardous. The Italian luxury liner Cristoforo Colombo, somewhere beyond the 100-mile radius but with a doctor on board, is diverted.

The seas are mounting, and Harry Ingram is still bleeding.

While this was going on, the Public Health Service doctor also was giving long-distance advice to a ship carrying a crewman with appendicitis. It isn't always as dramatic, but the decisions the doctor must make at any time "can be quite hairy."

Dr. Harris Gibson, 29, a surgeon from Mobile, Ala., has often been involved in medico messages.

"You get a layman describing as best he can a medical condition. He may give you a diagnosis of heart attack. You have to decide what to do. Frequently the danger of transferring the patient is greater than the disease."

Most advice is sent through the Coast Guard radio system, but sometimes it is necessary to have the doctor talk directly to a crewman. Sometimes a doctor is flown to the scene, and put aboard the ship. One doctor had to stay aboard, and landed in Scotland.

Out in the Atlantic, Harry Ingram was placed on a stretcher the first message. The stretcher, lashed to a raft, was put into a small Coast Guard boat and he was finally taken aboard the cutter Acushnet.

A last message then went to

"Patient arrived USPHS

"Case closed."

Miss Ruth Ann VanBebber of Murrayville and David Ray Meyers of this city were united in marriage Sunday afternoon, April seventeenth, at the First Baptist church. The pastor, the Reverend John Henschke, performed the ceremony.

Cut flowers, white gladioli, daisies and ferns adorned the altar. Beverly Waggoner sang with Mary McGinnis as the accompanist.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ivan VanBebber of Murrayville and the late Mr. VanBebber. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Meyers, 1002 North Main street.

Miss Jerrie Kemp was maid of honor; Mrs. John Farmer, sister of the bride, the bridesmaid and Linda Jean Farmer, niece of the bride, flower girl and Jeff Meyer, nephew of the groom, ring bearer.

William Meyer, brother of the groom, was best man and Charles Meyer, another, was groomsman. Ushers were Robert VanBebber, John Farmer, Edward VanBebber and Paul Carter.

The bride, given in marriage by her oldest brother, Richard VanBebber of Springfield, wore a gown of delustered satin with lace applique which was fashioned and made by the bride's mother.

Her veil was of silk illusion held in place with a crown of pearls and sequins.

She carried a white lace covered Bible with an arrangement of white daisies and carnations.

The bride's attendants wore identical gowns of blue brocade fashioned on lines of the bride's gown and made by a sister-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Carolyn VanBebber. They wore matching headresses and carried bouquets of blue daisies.

The bride's mother wore blue wool blue wool crepe with white accessories and the groom's mother, aqua blue with white accessories. Each wore a corsage of white carnations.

S. JACKSONVILLE PTA INSTALLS NEW OFFICERS

Highlight of the April 26th meeting of the South Jacksonville School PTA was the installation of officers for the coming year. Mrs. Betty Jones, past president of the county PTA council conducted the ceremony.

Installed were: Mrs. James Wilham, president; Mrs. Jesse Pinkerton, vice president; Mrs. Charles Pritchard, secretary; and Gordon McGregor, treasurer.

President Donald Bates conducted the meeting, and both he and Principal Robert Adams expressed appreciation for the excellent support given to the school by the PTA during the past year.

The attendance award was won by Mrs. White's fifth grade room.

The program of instrumental music was presented under the direction of Mrs. Mildred Vasey, instrumental music teacher.

Appearing first were students of the fourth grade playing Tonettes, featuring Carol Way, Kim Holland, Donna Bringman, and Candy Crawford on glockenspiels, Grant Stevens, Doug Kircher, Gary Kirchhofer, and Steve Perkins on xylophones, and Mark Price on the tone block. Fifth grade band students played three numbers, with a fourth by a cornet trio consisting of Dean Russell, Mark Sorrell, and Mike Brannan. Sixth grade band students also played several selections. Two special numbers were played by a mixed ensemble consisting of Beth Hedrick, Brenda Minor, Susan Simonds, Carol Goodrick, J. D. Evans, Mike Pritchard, Kevin Floyd, and Reggie Markillie.

During the social hour, refreshments were served by the Kindergarten mothers.

News, Views Century Ago

From the Jacksonville Weekly Journal:

Within the past week dogs have killed forty-two valuable sheep, and as many more were badly injured, most of which will probably die—and all those within a mile of our city. We recommend to our farmers the expedient of shooting all dogs found off their owner's premises, except when in charge of their owners. Evils that cannot be endured must be cured.

A PROLIFIC COW — Our old friend, Mr. Samuel Black, living about three miles north of the city, is the owner of a cow about ten years old that, in the last seven years, has had and raised FIFTEEN calves. The cow is a good milk'er and certainly a good breeder. Morgan County against the State for stock raising.

Gen. Haynie did not show for his speaking engagement Saturday night much to the disappointment of many. Yet we have half a dozen able speakers in our city who could have entertained us to advantage. We are too much in the habit of ignoring our own speakers who are able men, and running after strangers or something new. No other city in the State, perhaps, treats its own men of ability so disrespectfully.

From the Jacksonville Sentinel:

At a late hour last Saturday night a person named Storms, while walking on Beardstown street, north of town, met a person carrying a carpet bag, who inquired of him the time.

Most of the papers were of value and have been deposited in the Illinois State Historical Library in Springfield. One was particularly interesting—an "Extra" edition of the Alton Observer, the anti-slavery paper put out by Elijah Lovejoy.

This issue told of the proceedings of the Illinois Anti-Slavery convention held in Upper Alton in late October, 1837, just a few days before Lovejoy was killed as he sought to protect his fourth press from the mob that had already destroyed three presses.

The donor of the pamphlet was asked if he would mind holding it for a photograph. He said he wouldn't mind at all, he would go home and shave and put on a clean shirt and come right back.

He evidently changed his mind, because that's the last anybody around the office saw of him. So Miss Nancy Lynn of the circulation department consented to hold the old paper for a photograph.

A gal from Virginia, Cass county, Nancy is the undisputed queen of the Journal Courier mail room, and much prettier than the man who went AWOL.

DOMESTIC

May, 1866

The Southern Methodist Conference at New Orleans has voted to change the name of the church from "Methodist Episcopal Church" to simply "Methodist Church".

The Denver (Colo.) News states that Raphael Grandjean, who has a large plantation in New Mexico, brought a train to that city, consisting in part of six full-grown camels, which were well loaded with wool.

In his later days Dr. Sturtevant wrote "Of the difficulties under which this college labored, in the times in which the martyrs Lovejoy fell, and his printing press was thrown into the Mississippi . . . no man can form any just estimate who was not himself an actor in those scenes. The same power of the prominent teachers of this College by night and by day and ever ready to let loose upon them the dogs of war. He distrusted all Easterners and detested Yankees, holding the latter responsible for lawyers bringing books into court and quoting from them, for Sunday schools, missionary societies and temperance campaigns. He was a fast strategist, a master of sarcasm and had the crowd with him."

No Friend of Yankees

Linder was a true Kentuckian—a handsome, virile individual who liked good whisky, fast horses, beautiful women and stud poker. He was an excellent speaker and could keep a tavern open all night simply by telling stories and singing songs with unpublished lyrics. He distrusted all Easterners and detested Yankees, holding the latter responsible for lawyers bringing books into court and quoting from them, for Sunday schools, missionary societies and temperance campaigns. He was a fast strategist, a master of sarcasm and had the crowd with him.

So, thanks to Beecher's misdirected help, Lovejoy's original plans for the convention went with the wind. Dr. Blackburn presided at the first session, learned to his dismay what was going on, and got in his hurry and went home. Beecher and some of his friends decided to pray on the subject, and try again the next day. The next day was just more of the same.

Finally Beecher got a small group together at a private home and there the Illinois State Anti-Slavery society was organized. The president was Elihu Wolcott, a Yankee merchant with interests in Jacksonville, Beardstown and Naples and married to Miss Sarah C. Crocker, New Hampshire spinster who was the first teacher and principal of the Jacksonville Female Academy.

Come Home Wiser

Of the 32 Morgan county men who had answered the call to convention only five stayed for the concluding prayer service. The rest had all returned home, sorry that they had listened to Beecher and had ignored the advice of such true anti-slavery people as David A. Smith, who had freed his 25 slaves when he moved from Huntsville, Ala., to Jacksonville, and Julian M. Sturtevant, who was to succeed Beecher as president of I.C.

The victory of Lovejoy's enemies made him all the more desperate and he decided to fight. And met death.

But Beecher's work was also most costly to Illinois College.

Prelude To Riot, Death

Today the most imposing monument in Alton is dedicated to the memory of Elijah Parish Lovejoy. But the people who made up that bustling and gaudy river town nearly 130 years ago didn't think much of the high-minded, blunt-spoken abolitionist who was warring on the South, the town's best customer.

Lovejoy was killed by a mob the night of Nov. 7, 1837 while he and a small group of friends were trying to defend a new printing press that had just arrived from Cincinnati.

Although smaller mobs had destroyed three earlier presses—throwing one in the Mississippi river, breaking up one in Second avenue and throwing the third in Piase creek—the Lovejoy anti-slavery sheet was experiencing a steady and profitable growth, adding new readers weekly from as far away as Maine and South Carolina.

After the third press was destroyed Lovejoy wondered whether he should try again. To learn just what his Illinois friends thought about him he put out a call for a convention to organize a state anti-slavery society, to be held in Upper Alton Oct. 26, 1837.

Lovejoy got some of his strongest support from Jacksonville. And the same people helped get him into a real jam.

Upon receiving the call to Alton Edward Beecher, first president of Illinois College, jumped into the fracas with both feet. So did several of his strong abolitionist friends.

Beecher was a true son of Lyman Beecher, the devout. It was said at that time that there were three groups of people in the world: men, women and Beechers.

Self-Appointed Aid

Beecher took it upon himself to amend Lovejoy's call, changing it to invite "all men of free inquiry."

So far as Lovejoy's opponents in Alton were concerned this was just what the doctor ordered.

The Jacksonville delegation, excepting Beecher, went to Alton by boat from Naples while their self-appointed leader went to Carlinville to accompany Dr. Rev. Gideon Blackburn in his private carriage. The two men arrived late and were immediately told what had happened to the convention—the men of free inquiry were in the majority and had the situation wired down.

The opposition was certainly a formidable lot: the leading merchants in town, all the ministers except one, all the legislators in that part of the state, the leading candidate for governor, plus the riff-raff of the town, all under the astute leadership of the Illinois Attorney General, Usher F. Linderman.

No Friend of Yankees

Linder was a true Kentuckian—a handsome, virile individual who liked good whisky, fast horses, beautiful women and stud poker. He was an excellent speaker and could keep a tavern open all night simply by telling stories and singing songs with unpublished lyrics. What's the difference between a butcher and a corn doctor. One cuts the corns, and the other cuts the cuts.

Misery loves company, and so does a marriageable young lady.

A gentleman at the opera, the other night, in sounding the praises of a new opera-glass he had just purchased, said, "Why, bless your soul, it brings the ladies on the opposite side of the house so near that I can smell the musk on their pocket-handkerchiefs, and hear the beating of their dear little hearts."

"I have lost my appetite," said a gigantic fellow, who was an eminent performer on the trencher, to a friend. "I hope," said the friend, "no poor man has found it, for it would ruin him in a week."

May, 1866

While the daughter of a keeper of an old curiosity shop in Paris was displaying a Malay dagger to a purchaser, recently, the weapon fell from the scabbard and slightly grazed her foot. The limb began to swell immediately, and had to be amputated to save her life. On testing the weapon, it was found that the point had been dipped in poison.

The year 1867 is fixed as the centenary year of St. Peter's martyrdom. The anniversary is to be observed at Rome with great pomp, and other celebrations are to be added, to make the year memorable and the city highly attractive, both to the religious and the curious of other creeds.

A bark named "The True-love", which was lately sent from England to the Davis Straits' whale fishery, is probably the oldest vessel now afloat and in service. It was built in Philadelphia in 1764, and consequently now 102 years old.

Illinois Farm OUTLOOK

CATTLE ON FEED UP 13 PERCENT

Here are the highlights of the beef cattle situation as shown in the quarterly report of cattle on feed issued by the USDA at mid-April:

1. Farmers put 24 percent more cattle on feed during the first quarter of this year than during the like period last year.

2. The number of cattle on feed April 1 was up 13 percent from the year before. Most of the increase was in cattle that will reach market weights during this second quarter.

3. Cattle feeders reported that they planned to market 12 percent more fed cattle during his April to June quarter than they sold a year ago.

Heavy cattle. On the first of April, farmers in 32 states were feeding 333,000 steers weighing over 1,100 pounds, 8 percent less than a year ago. This decrease in heavy steers, however, was more than offset by an increase in heavy heifers. The number of heifers weighing over 900 pounds was listed at 234,000, 18 percent more than last year.

These two groups, the heaviest steers plus the heaviest heifers, totaled 567,000 head, just 1 percent more than a year ago. Most of these cattle will be marketed by the end of April.

26 percent more nearing market weights. On April 1, cattle were fattening 1,853,000 steers weighing 900 to 1,100 pounds, 20 percent more than last year. They were also feeding 937,000 heifers weighing 700 to 900 pounds, 38 percent more.

Journal Courier, Jacksonville, Ill., May 1, 1966

Cattlemen in the 11 Western States reported 2,394,000 on feed, 12 percent more than last year.

Says Milk Price Boost Not To Effect Volume

The recent price boost for raw milk will not have much effect on volume in the near future, says Fletcher A. Gourley, general manager of Prairie Farms Dairy, Inc., Carlinville.

In the current issue of Prairie Farms News, Gourley writes THIS IS OUR OPINION — In the past, sharp increases in raw milk prices brought sharp increases in production. Today and for the past three of five years conditions have changed and our opinion is that the increase in price will not result in any sizeable increase in farm production. We believe this statement is true for many reasons.

Farmers cannot switch now from one commodity to another, which was true years ago.

Today it would require not less than $50,000 and possibly considerably more for a farm family to change their operations to dairying. Of course, an increase in milk prices is not going to bring about such expenditures unless the individual is reasonably sure that dairying can be profitable for many years.

It is our belief the present increase we have had will not result in new shippers starting to dairy. We believe that if pork prices remain over $18.00 per hundred, beef prices hold $20.00 and higher, it will require a Class I price of $7.00 per hundred with a blend of possibly $6.00 per hundred before we will have any noticeable increase in dairying from farm people converting to dairying.

Certainly it is true the present increase should retard sellouts and present shippers may increase the size of their herds.

However, it certainly will not create any rush of farmers converting to the dairy operation.

In fact, in the past two or three years, to the best of our knowledge, Prairie Farms has not had three new members that resulted from equipping their farms for a new dairy enterprise.

We know the price of milk out of the store is not a determining factor in the consumption of milk by the American family. Consumers must pay more for their dairy needs and we know that they will pay more.

CONTRACT SPRAYERS MUST BE LICENSED

If anybody sprays pesticides for more than himself and two others he must be licensed by the state department of agriculture.

This law, passed by the last General Assembly in the interest of public health and safety, has escaped the attention of some farmers who have the equipment and on occasion spray for some of their neighbors.

During the winter months the UI College of Agriculture and Illinois Natural History Survey held five schools on the subject prior to individual examinations by the Illinois Department of Agriculture.

For those who missed these schools there will be a special school Friday, May 20, at the Illinois Building, State Fairgrounds, Springfield. Those interested should see their farm adviser.

About 41 per cent of women who had ever been married were first married before their 20th birthday, the Census Bureau reports.

Hospitality Day At Western 4-H Camp May 22

Sunday, May 22, will be "Hospitality Day" at the Western Illinois 4-H camp on the shores of Lake Jacksonville.

4-H council members from the 19 counties in the district, with their husbands and wives; camp counselors and their spouses, and 4-H club leaders and their husbands and wives are invited to spend the day at the camp.

There will be a tour of the cabin area and woods, beginning at 2:30 p.m. Then those attending will be divided into groups for special activities for the balance of the afternoon. A chicken barbecue supper will be followed by an "Indian ceremony" given by counselors and 4-H members.

The only charge will be for the supper, $1.25. Reservations may be made at county extension offices to May 22.

The 4-H camp committee has announced there will be two "Family Camps" this season. If they wish families may bring their own tent or camp trailer. The period will begin Friday noon and conclude Sunday afternoon. There will be a full schedule of activities for each member of the family.

The dates are July 22-24 and Aug. 5-7. Reservations will be accepted at the county extension offices to June 15, on a first come, first served basis.

Brooklyn, N.Y., is known as the "City of Churches."

Wildlife Stamps Feature Species Near Extinction

Four species of endangered American wildlife, plus one species that has been extinct since 1914, are featured on a new edition of Spring stamps now being mailed to thousands of conservationists across the country by the National Wildlife Federation, Washington, D.C.

Prepared under the direction of Federation Art Director Roger Tory Peterson, the original paintings from which the stamps were reproduced feature the work of two well-known wildlife artists—Al Kreml and Don Eckelberry.

Species depicted in full color on the sheet of 50 decorative stamps are the whooping crane, ivory-billed woodpecker, key deer, passenger pigeon, and grizzly bear. Once the most abundant bird in North America, the last passenger pigeon died in the Cincinnati Zoo in 1914. It became extinct because of loss of habitat as hardwood forests were clear-cut and burned, coupled with over-harvest by market hunters.

The other species, now endangered, might be brought back through sound conservation measures and restoration of their original habitat. Their numbers have dwindled to 44 whooping cranes, a few ivory-billed woodpeckers, about 300 key deer, and several hundred grizzly bears.

Strange Shapes In The Sky

By WALTER B. HENDRICKSON JR.

Morning Thoughts
By Mary Pence Claywell

The sky is so blue . . . the air crisp and sweet,
The people so happy, that pass down the street;
The frost on the house-tops is white as the snow,
And the grasses so crunchy, where bright diamonds glow;
Let us lift up our eyes, to the sky overhead . . .
And hear our hearts say to us,
"GOD IS NOT DEAD!"
O help us choose, Father, while all is still well,
To kill out an EVIL THOUGHT rooted in HELL;
We know, only fools would believe Thou art dead . . .
But when a FIRE'S started . . . Dear Lord . . . how it SPREADS!

"OLD KINDERHOOK"

The term "O.K." is said by authorities to come from the initials for "Old Kinderhook," a nickname for Martin Van Buren taken from the name of the New York village where he was born. It was used as a political rallying cry when he ran for the presidency in 1840, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

A variety of bizarre shaped aircraft are taking to the sky to perform many strange tasks including flying both in the air and under water. There are circular wings, movable wings—and no wings at all.

The jet fighter shown in the picture borrows from the Falcon to solve a problem that has plagued plane designers since the end of World War II: the need for broad wings for take-off at low speed from short runways combined with the need for narrow or swept-back wings for today's high speeds. Movable wings enable the F-III tri-service jet fighter to take off with its wings straight out, then as its speed increases toward its top speed of 1,650 miles an hour it folds its wings back like the Falcon.

Previously swift jets often used swept back wings, some speed deprives them of that essential element of surprising the enemy.

Sometimes the runways had to be nearly two miles long. Obviously such long runways cannot often be supplied in combat areas. The movable wings of the F-III erases the need for these long runways.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

By John Rankin

The large, two-story brick house setting back on a hill behind an iron fence, its gate hanging loosely on one rusty hinge, was the last of a long line of nondescript dwellings scattered along a little used street leading out of town. Shutters drooped lopsidedly from its windows, its sagging doors swayed to and fro on creaky hinges, as though touched by invisible hands. Tall grass and weeds covered the spacious lawn — leaving only the faint markings of a tree-shaded drive or pathway leading in from the street.

Adventure Bound
And on a bright afternoon of a summer day the ancient and deserted-looking house held a novel attraction for a pair of adventure-seeking small boys who had strolled out from town. Especially so for bold and venturesome Tom Ashby, a newcomer to the area.

Fascinated by its strange, silent suggestion of dignity and majesty of an earlier day, Tom stared spellbound at the old, building a moment, his eyes sparkling with excitement as he turned to his pal Billy Wakefield and said, "Sure is a creepy looking old place. Why don't we go in and look around a little maybe?"

Billy shook his head dubiously. "You crazy or something? That place is loaded with spooks! My dad says nobody has gone near it since an old guy named Jelkite or something lived there."

Cautiously then, as though fearful of waking a horde of sleeping spirits with each measured step, they started up the stairway. Then as they gained the top step and proceeded across the porch a door leading into the house silently and very slowly swung open, seemingly from the breath of a departed spirit, and the figure of a headless man dressed in a radiant white robe appeared in the doorway!

"Whew!" Tom whistled softly. "Must have been a creepy sort of old guy, eh?" "Yeah, plenty," Billy nodded. "My dad says he was a sort of screwy old duck with a long white beard and most folks stayed away from him. And even the police won't fool around in there now."

No Daytime Spooks

Spooking his eyes in the late afternoon sun as he peered into the old house a moment, Tom squared his shoulders in a gesture of bravery and said, "But spooks don't

Let's Go Birding

Easter Scene
By Emma Mae Leonhard

Although our Easter cold and disagreeable, we enjoyed some Easter treats. A freezing frost blackened our pink magnolias in one night. Yet our Forsythia bushes, appropriately called the Easter Bells, warmed the scene with their masses of yellow blossoms strung along their branches — graceful streamers of flower sunshine embroidering the gray blankets of fog and mist.

Here and there, daffodils stood like little Easter messengers holding burning yellow candles. They silently announced to us that spring had risen. We marveled at their persistent thrusting through the cold dark earth to the sunlight above, and were warmed by their example and message.

Kinglet Appears
Birds also joined this Easter scene — particularly the Golden-crowned Kinglet. We received several questions from people about "cute" little birds that were flitting and fluttering everywhere, especially in pines and spruces. Were the warblers returning? Not yet. What kind of wrens were they? They were smaller than wrens. These tiny, short-tailed, olive-gray, nervous-like birds were undoubtedly Golden-crowned Kinglets, and a few Ruby-crowned Kinglets. We had an influx of these small fluffy birds this Easter time.

Tiny Creatures
Aside from hummingbirds, Kinglets are the tiniest of our birds. They have the unwarbler-like habit of nervously flicking their wings as they dart from twig to twig. They do much of their feeding at the tips of tree branches and often flutter in the air as they pick out the sleeping insects and insect eggs hidden in the bark crevices. With enough food they find it easy to keep the flame of life going, even in sub-zero weather.

Some Golden-crowned Kinglets are with us during the winter. When our autumn-colored leaves are fluttering to the ground, these tiny birds fly in from the North and flutter with the falling leaves.

When the silent snow covers the leaves, they search the branches, particularly the snow-laden spruces and hemlocks, and find the insect fuel which maintains their body heat. When the spring sun begins to warm our world, they leave for the cooler North. We do not understand why such large flocks of Golden-crowned Kinglets waited until April to call on us, but of us enjoyed these happy-hearted and care-free Easter guests. Their little orange and yellow crowns joined the Easter Bells and dapper daffodils to spark our cold Easter season.

Chinese Children Being Taught To Hate Americans

EDITOR'S NOTE — Frank Tuohy, a British author, is just back from China where he had the chance, as U.S. reporters do not, to view the way life is going in the world's most populous country. This article on "The children of Papa Mao" is among uncensored reports Tuohy brought out of China.

By FRANK TUOHY

PEKING (AP) — Small Chinese children are being taught to hate Americans. When I protested that American children are not taught to hate Chinese,

I was told: "Our system of education is different from theirs for the U.S. is not a Socialist country."

During my first week in China, I said to myself over and over again: "It's wonderful what they've done for the children." In the big cities and the surrounding countryside I saw no signs of hunger, though clothes are sometimes ragged; the children are bright eyed, their skins clear.

Children Healthy
There are few shaven scalps,

Journal Courier, Jacksonville, Ill., May 1, 1966

no scabs or skin ailments. I visited schools in Hangchow where the windows were open to a light snow falling outside, but no child was coughing. There were very few running noses. It is the Chinese children and their mothers who have benefited most from preventive medicine, the prenatal care, the clinics in the communes, and the new hospitals in the cities.

The doctors I met in these places nearly always turned out to be hefty young girls with braids and firm handshakes; you find the same type of girl everywhere, in charge of creches, kindergartens and primary schools, where precocious 3-year-olds play organized games and perform folk dances with complete confidence and wide smiles of enjoyment.

A burst of clapping, "Hullo, uncle!" "Hullo, auntie!" are the greetings for all strangers, whatever their nationality. With no shyness, they crowd towards you; taking your hand, they steer you from room to room, and when you leave, insist on shaking hands three or four times.

But even with the children, things in China are not quite what they seem. A mother in Shanghai admitted to me that "children always clap when they hear the words 'foreign friends'."

Open to All

In the same city I visited my first children's district palace. These places are open to all youngsters in the 16 districts of Shanghai after school and on Sundays, for sparetime activities.

Eight hundred children applauded as I arrived at the Shanghai children's palace. In the garden my two small guides led me to a sort of obstacle race, under barbed wire, over walls and up ladders, down tunnels. Each obstacle represented one stage in the famous Long March of 1935, and the child doing the full course would feel himself nearer the endurance and revolutionary spirit of Papa Mao Tze-tung, the Communist leader.

Inside the large converted house, a variety of activities were going on. Upstairs, little boys and girls charmingly sang some verses whose title turned out to be "We Must Study Hard for Our Revolution." Ten-year-olds did a folk dance, "Embroidering the Portrait of Chairman Mao." Later I heard such works as "We Must Defend Our Country, in Accordance with Chairman Mao's Teachings," "The People's Commune is Like a Golden Bridge" and "When I Become Grown Up, I Am Determined To Be a Peasant."

"Beat America"

In another room, boys were making model planes; not Chinese planes, but American ones, F101s and U2s and helicopters, shot down by Chinese or Vietnamese. Next door the art class was copying cartoons of bayoneted GI's. Earlier works pinned on the walls showed President Johnson, bandaged and on crutches, hobbling away from Viet Nam, under a Chinese slogan "Resolutely Wipe Out the U.S. Imperialists." Knock-kneed GI's collapsed in front of muscular South Vietnamese; paper tigers were throttled; helicopters exploded in dozens above the title "the U.S. Imperialists Refuse To Admit Their Defeat."

Quite apart from the subject matter of these efforts, I noticed no sign of originality; everything was copied by the children from clippings from party publications which were pinned to their desks. In fact, I concluded that creative originality is effectively banished from the new China.

This somewhat traumatic experience in Shanghai was repeated in Peking. North of the Forbidden City, the Palace of Imperial Longevity and its ornate surrounding buildings and sunlit courtyards have become the capital's children's center. Within the palace, 6-year-olds lined up to thrust a bayonet into the stomach of a cardboard GI-Johnson, while others used a real machinegun to "shoot up" an American landing field.

Red Scouts

In two rooms nearby two teachers with high pitched voices were lecturing with maps and pictures on U.S. aggression in China. Schoolgirls in Pioneers' red scarves listened in enthralled silence. The Pioneers are the Communist Scout movement.

Outside more pioneers marched to and fro, with Red flags. Afterward I asked my guide whether it is true that Pioneers must report on their parents' political reliability.

After a bit of hesitation, he said, "Our parents only gave birth to us, but Chairman Mao has saved us."

"If a child hears his father express bourgeois reactionary opinion, what should he do?"

"He should tell his teacher."

"What should his teacher do?"

"He should first visit the father and ask him to mend his ways. Then he will raise the matter at the next brigade meeting, and the party will take the matter up."

By this time, I had reconsidered my first view. It is still, perhaps, wonderful to see what has been done for Chinese children. But it is certainly terrible to see what is being done to them now.

One test of a really great bridge player is the ability to look ahead in the play. Here is a hand that helped the famous Four Aces team win the Vanderbilt Cup some 30-odd years ago.

The game was team of four and both South players reached six spades on identical bidding and the play for the first three tricks was the same. The King of hearts was opened and taken by South's ace. Then South attempted to cash his ace and King of diamonds only to have West ruff the second diamond. When the late Sherman Stearns of the Aces sat West he played a low club at trick four. South won with dummy's ace, ruffed a club in his hand, ruffed a low diamond, ruffed back to his hand, ruffed his last low diamond with the Queen of trumps and eventually lost a trump trick to East's jack to be down one.

At the other table West attempted to cash a heart trick. Mike Gottlieb who sat South ruffed in his hand, ruffed a low diamond with dummy's deuce of spades, cashed dummy's Queen of spades and led third heart. East showed out. Mike spread his hand and announced, "Squeeze for balance."

The opponents made him play the hand out but they had no defense. Mike ran off all his trumps. He discarded down to the ten of hearts and ace-jack of clubs and dummy before leading his last trump. This forced West to discard down to one club in order to keep a high heart. Mike discarded the ten of hearts from dummy and poor East had to discard down to one club also in order to keep from establishing Mike's nine of diamonds.

Quite a few players would have recognized the squeeze from the South seat. I wonder how many would have seen it coming from the West seat and ruined it as Sherman did with his club lead at trick four.

"WHAT CAN I DO?"

As we pay increased auto insurance premiums, read about higher insurance rates, regret the massacre on our highways, drain away lives and dollars, it is natural to ask, "What can I do?"

Try the following:

1. COOPERATE WITH governmental and private programs to reduce accidents and encourage others to do so. Make the subject part of everyday discussion.
2. SET STRAIGHT family, friends and acquaintances who seek something for nothing through groundless or exaggerated claims.
3. ENCOURAGE ALL citizens to serve on juries when called, to render verdicts based upon the law and evidence they hear, not upon sympathetic, emotional appeals.
4. TESTIFY TRUTHFULLY in court as a witness to an accident and do not seek to avoid being a witness. Otherwise, justice cannot be gained.

5. DO EVERYTHING possible to aid adjustment of legitimate claims quickly. Unreasonableness causes delay that aids no one.

6. REPORT ALL fraudulent cases which come to your attention to the prosecuting attorney. You may be the one who is defrauded.

7. TELL ALL your friends what you already know about these matters and ask them to do the same.

Remember That Dull Book 'Silas Marner'?

By GEOFFREY GOULD
AP Education Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Remember when you had to read a rather dull book entitled "Silas Marner" back in the seventh grade?

"Silas Marner" is still with many American school children, and most would agree it hasn't improved any with the passage of time.

The "Silas Marner Problem" has become a sort of symbol to many educators who favor new life and new methods in the teaching of English — the subject school children get the most of throughout primary and secondary school.

The book by George Eliot, a bucolic success-through-tribulation story set in rural England of another century, is a symbol to these leaders in the English teaching field of how hard it is to institute change.

"It got into the curriculum in about 1910," said Dr. James R. Squire of the University of Illinois.

"It was third rate at best then," Dr. Squire, executive secretary of the National Council of Teachers of English, said in an interview.

Dr. Michael F. Shugrue of New York University, suggested that parents who had suffered through "Silas Marner" somehow expect it as part of the way things are.

"When is Harold or Gladys going to get Silas Marner?" they ask, he said. "I had it in seventh grade," they say.

If the teacher says, "We're dropping it this year," there is a shocked response, Shugrue said.

Why not use a modern book like "Catcher in the Rye" by J. D. Salinger, which young people today seem to identify with?

Squire said that "Catcher in the Rye" essentially is an attack on the traditional stability of middle-class values — religious and moral.

"It raises a lot of doubts about the adult world," Squire said.

The adolescent hero, Holden Caulfield, struggles through life like one trapped in quicksand. There is much parental resistance to using it in schools.

On the other hand, Squire said, the lesson of "Silas Marner" is that if you lead a good life and do as your parents tell you, everything is going to work out in the end.

May Detect Enemy Subs*Porpoises Learning To Tell Metals Apart

By RALPH DIGHTON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Navy scientists have taught porpoises to tell one metal from another — a valuable trick for creatures which some day may be used in detecting submarines, mines and underwater missile installations.

For example a patch of metal not customarily found on submarines could help wide-roaming squadrons of porpoises identify friendly craft. Any craft not bearing this patch would be subject to ramming by the porpoises, trained to carry explosives in body harnesses.

This new achievement of the sleek, 200-pound mammals was disclosed Thursday at a marine science symposium of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, which also goes in for aquanautics.

Researchers W. E. Evans and B. A. Powell of the U.S. Naval Ordnance Test Station at China Lake, Calif., showed films of porpoises trained to pick out a plastic-encased panel of copper from identical-looking panels of aluminum and other materials. When they touch the right panel they get a piece of fish.

"We're not certain how they do it," Powell said in an interview, "but apparently it's another discrimination capability of their built-in, natural sonar."

Porpoises can spot food and other objects even when blinded by emitting "creaking-door" noises. Reflected sound waves tell them distance and direction of the objects. A much cruder electronic system is the basis of the Navy's underwater sonar.

"We've tried our best to confuse the porpoises," Powell said, "by using panels of the same size but different thicknesses. So far they've scored 100 per cent."

Powell said the brainy mammals' hearing apparently is so acute they can tell the minute differences in reflection by materials of varying density, regardless of thickness.

Washington Widows Must Decide To Stay Or Go Home

EDITOR'S NOTE — To stay or go home, that's the question for Washington widows. Many stay, in seclusion or in the lime-light, and make new lives for themselves.

By KELLY SMITH
WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Estes Kefauver walks up narrow brick alley off Embassy Row, pushes aside a battered door and climbs steep steps to an artist's studio above an old garage.

She laughs. "Hi everyone!" She dons a faded blue smock and picks up a paint brush. Ten years ago this lovely green-eyed woman stood beside her husband in hope and heartbreak as the tall Tennessee senator traveled coast to coast with a handshake and a coonskin cap.

Those were the days when Kefauver was a household word as a result of his investigations into organized crime, days of fighting for two presidential nominations, campaigning for vice president on the Adlai E. Stevenson ticket, and finally, settling back into the Senate.

Decisions

Suddenly, one August night in 1963, Kefauver died and his widow, Nancy, faced decisions:

Whether to return to Tennessee or remain in Washington, whether to further her husband's work — a widow often is offered her husband's unexpected term, whether to work and where, and eventually, how to mold and cope with a new identity.

"Washington can be an unhappy place for a woman once in the limelight beside a famous husband. There are lonely tasks, families to raise, and always reminders of the past. Some widows stay and some return home."

The decision isn't easy. Many have lived much of their married life as wives of political figures and while their official home may be a faroff state, ties are here.

Some retreat to quiet drawing rooms; some return to the social spotlight, and some, of course, remarry.

"I've been in Washington longer than I've been anywhere in my life," said Nancy Kefauver, reminiscing in an interview. She chose to stay where she and her lawyer husband first came in 1939.

She turned down suggestions that she succeed her husband in the Senate, saying, "My first responsibility is to my children. I am not trained or qualified for public office."

"The average wife isn't equipped to carry on. I was simply a housewife and an artist. I decided I had to work. I had to expand my studio and teach fulltime — I had three children left to get through college."

Three months after her husband's death, a few days before the assassination, President John F. Kennedy appointed her to the U.S. State Department as adviser on fine arts.

Eagerly she took the reins of a new program, "Art in the Embassies," immersed herself in the problems of an infant endeavor, and within a year made it one of the most popular programs ever carried to U.S. embassies overseas.

Lucky

"I was lucky," she says. "It kept me busy."

The program aims at placing in U.S. embassies abroad, works of American art — graphics, ceramics, mosaics, sculpture, wall hangings, paintings — that depict the American scene and its culture.

Her art studio — down the alley, above the old garage — is her retreat to a world she loves. Called the Kefauver-Fariolletti Studio it has 70 students in four classes weekly. She makes it a point to be there Saturday mornings. Her partner, Byrd Fariolletti, teaches the other classes.

A year ago Nancy and her family moved from the big home they had in senatorial days and took a smaller one. Their home in Chattanooga is up for sale.

Daughter Lynda, 24, is with an art publications firm in New York City. David, 20, is attending the University of Tennessee. Diane, 18, and Gail, 15, live with their mother.

Of remarriage, she says no, not now. Her job keeps her busy, and besides, "I had too perfect a marriage."

If Washington is a poignant home for her, it is also one of excitement and challenge. "You get attached to it," she says. Others have too.

Mrs. John Foster Dulles, whose husband was secretary of state under President Dwight D. Eisenhower, lives quietly in the same home she and her husband occupied in the busy days of the 1950s.

Not Active

"I'm not active now," says Mrs. Dulles, an attractive, gray-haired grandmother. "I have many friends and family here and they've all been very nice." Her son, Allen Dulles, lives with his family in nearby Georgetown.

Mrs. Clare Engle, whose husband was a California senator, has kept her home, occasionally shows up in the Senate beauty shop, and dines quietly with close friends. Otherwise, she is not often in public.

Some become public figures.

Mrs. C. Wayland Brooks, daughter of a senator and wife of the late senator from Illinois, is assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee.

She has a ranch in Idaho, is a state senator there, spends much of her time traveling for the national GOP, and says, "Going into politics always appalled me. It was the farthest thing from my mind, but it's become a great part of my life now."

Take Office

Widows have succeeded their husbands in Congress. The latest to do so, Mrs. Albert Thomas of Houston, Tex., took her oath of office March 30, and says she plans to retire when her husband's term is up this

After George Mesta's death, his widow — daughter of an Oklahoma oil man, married to a Pittsburgh steel man — turned parties into political fun. She was appointed minister to Luxembourg by President Harry S. Truman, inspired the Broadway hit "Call Me Madam" and at 75, still is a White House favorite.

Hungarian-born Mrs. Cafritz, widow of a millionaire real estate man, is an attractive, black-haired artist, mother of three sons, and is often found among politicos, entertaining at her own home.

One woman said, "Washington is a crazy town for anyone."

These women have active lives, professionally and privately. Some complain that there is difficulty in attending formal functions which couples frequent, but generally a colleague lends his arm and all runs smoothly.

A single woman's social hurdle depends on her own tastes. Two of the city's biggest party givers — Perle Mesta and Gwen Cafritz — were wives of prominent men.

One woman said, "Washington is a crazy town for anyone. Being a widow — being anyone for that matter — is a personal adjustment. I don't like to be reminded I'm a widow. No one does. I stayed because I couldn't bear to return home, and I think that although there are reminders here, this is where my challenge is."

"It's such a busy place, things sort of pass you by. You have to learn to live for the future. You either adjust to it, and hide sorrow, or don't. I did, and I'm glad I stayed."

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Chicago White Sox kept Cleveland from setting a major league record Friday night, defeating the previously unbeaten Indians 4-1 and ending their winning streak at 10. It was the fifth straight victory for the White Sox.

Gary Peters, who hit a homer for the White Sox, and reliever Bob Locker brought the Indians streak to an end by keeping eight hits well scattered.

The Indians had tied the major league record for the most victories at the start of a season when they beat California Thursday night. The record was set by the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers and tied by the 1962 Pittsburgh Pirates.

Peters worked the first six innings and gave up six hits and Vic Davalillo's homer, win winning his first game.

CHICAGO (AP) — Richie Allen drove in one run and scored another before being injured while ace right-hander Jim Bunning held Chicago in check Friday as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Cubs 5-1.

Allen left the game with an injured right arm after scoring on Bill White's single for the Phillies second run in the fourth inning. He was hurt stealing second.

Allen singled home Johnny Callison, who had doubled, with the Phils' first run in the first inning.

Bunning extended his scoreless inning streak to 20 before being tagged for a home run by Adolfo Phillips in the seventh. It was the second victory against one defeat for the 34-year-old veteran.

At 47, Peanuts Lowrey Of Phils Is The Top 'Hitter' In Majors

By AL CARTWRIGHT
Written for Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

PHILADELPHIA — (NEA) — The best hitter on the Phillies is 47 years old.

He also is short and paunchy and, to use the complimentary term, balding.

He is better hitter than Richie Allen and Bill White and Johnny Callison.

He can outhit them, providing the object they are swinging at is a golf ball.

Peanuts Lowrey

Lowrey wins all the ballplayers' golf tournaments, or so it seems. He is the first base coach for the Phillies and the Arnold Palmer of the big leagues.

Better make that the Gary Player of the big leagues. He and Player are a better physical comparison — providing Player would get off that health kick for a year or two.

Lowrey won't discuss his golf game while in uniform, but he'll make a sort of 19th hole out of any hotel lobby.

Lowrey is a little guy from California who smokes long cigars. He lit up one that looked like the shaft of a 2-iron. Lowrey puffed and pondered the question: Is he really the best golfer in baseball?

"I don't like to pop off," he replied. "All I can say is, who's gonna beat me? I'll play anybody."

Ken Harrelson, the Kansas City A's first baseman who apparently talks a good game, will pop off for you. There is a tournament for the big leaguers at Indian Wells Country Club in Palm Springs, Calif., just after the World Series. Har-

Weiss Refuses To Gloat Over Yanks' Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who had a role in the New York Yankees' greatest years — 19 pennants over three decades — refuses to gloat over the sudden collapse of the team that gave him the gate six years ago.

"I am too familiar with the 10th-place experience myself to start taking potshots at anyone else in that position," George Weiss said Thursday.

"I wouldn't, anyhow. There are too many fellows on the team that I was closely connected with or years. They are close friends. They still seem like my children. They are in another league, and I wish them well."

Weiss, now 71, joined the Yankees as director of farm operations in 1932 and in 1947 moved up to general manager, a job he held until 1960 when he resigned — victim of the Yankees' youth movement.

He then moved over to the rival New York Mets, bringing Casey Stengel with him.

From 1932 through 1960 he saw players he helped develop on Yankee farms win a total of 19 pennants. During his tenure as general manager, the New Yorkers won 10 pennants and eight world championships.

Believes It's Just Not Dead

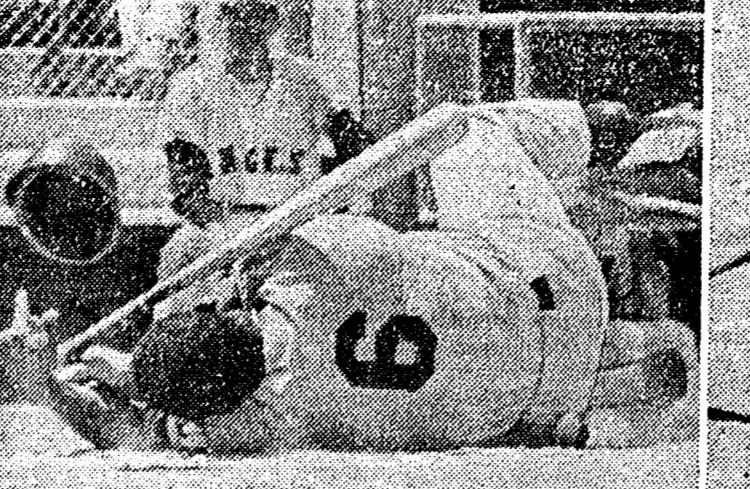

Weiss refuses to join those wailers who contend that the Yankees have left themselves with a beat-up batch of oldtimers and cripples and that their dynasty is dead.

"The Yankees have had a lot of bad luck — many injuries," the top Met executive said. "I think their present slump is just temporary. They have quite a bit of good talent. They'll come back."

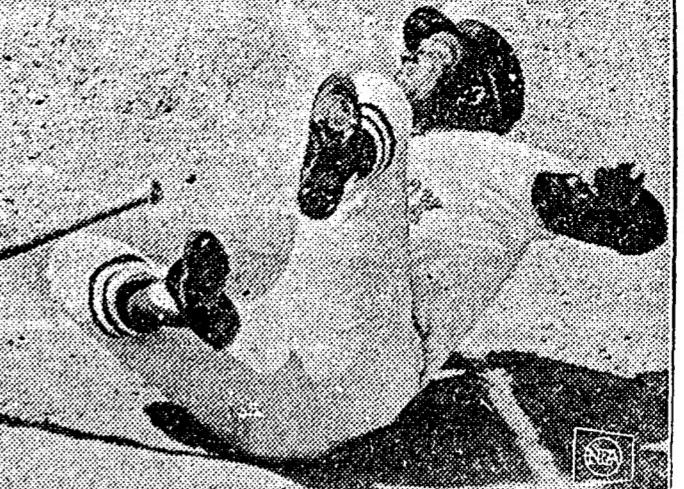

Weiss also said he felt that Mickey Mantle's continued presence on the squad was vital to the team.

"This great star is a wonderful inspiration," Weiss added. "I don't care whether he's sitting on the bench or just taking periodic times at bat, he gives the team a lift."

"We are getting better, but we have a far way to go yet," he said.

The Slow 'Roller' Stymies Braves

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

ATLANTA — (NEA) — The flow of flowing from Judge Elm-Roller's chambers in Wisconsin are very somber.

Baseball is not accustomed to hearing itself described as "monopolistic" and it is not accustomed to court decisions based on antitrust laws.

And while the verbal battling continues between Wisconsin and Georgia Atlanta players,

It is even more typical that the players haven't requested any legal information.

"I don't think the players should get involved," says Frank Bolling, the Braves' lead on base and player representative. "I, as player rep, haven't asked management for any explanations. They have enough problems and the team lawyers are all tied up, anyway."

"No, I don't know anything about antitrust laws and the legalities involved except for what I read in the papers. I'm sure the club knows what it is doing. Our job is on the field and that's all I want to do."

Catcher Joe Torre has been following the case closely, but he also admits little knowledge of the legalities leading to the decision.

"It's a shame," Torre said. "Baseball has been such a clean game. This is hurting it."

"I suppose the whole thing will wind up in the Supreme Court. Wisconsin is trying to prove a point and I think it has succeeded. But this arguing between the states is like beating your head against the wall."

Wade Blasingame, a 16-game winner for the Braves last season, is one of the few players polled who made an effort to really understand the situation.

"I've read up on it," he said. "I've also spoken to a few lawyers. And from what they've told me and what I've read, I don't think the club will move back to Milwaukee. As far as I know we're in Atlanta for the next 25 years."

Outfielder Felipe Alou is not confident.

"The American ballplayers know more about it than the Latin Americans on the team," Alou said. "Personally, I am worried and so are some of the other Latin Americans on the team."

"They have families and it would difficult for them if something were to happen."

"I know I have been thinking about it a lot. I just hope it won't affect my play. But how can you concentrate when you don't understand if you will be in Atlanta one month from now?"

It is an excellent question. Right now, there are no answers.

Defending champion Carrollton will be heavily favored in the 6th annual Greene County track and field meet to be held at Carrollton Tuesday, May 3. Field events will be started at 6:30, track events at 7:00. Greenfield and North Greene are the other two schools in the meet.

After the tournament, Harrelson climbed in a car, alight. But it was a cab, and it took him to the airport. Lowrey got in the Mustang, drove it to his home in Los Angeles and gave it to his daughter as a present. He has won at Palm Springs three times in five tries, and if this keeps up he'll be able to open up Hustling Harry's Car Agency.

Lowrey became interested in golf in the '40s when he played with the Cubs.

"I didn't think much of it at first," he said. "Hit the ball and walk after it. I was used to hitting a baseball and running. First time I played a full round I shot a 95. That winter at home, I was hooked. I got down in the '80s and I've been playing six times a week every winter since then."

Now Lowrey throws low 70s at the ballplayers and any unsuspecting natives he can find. In a pro-am at Long Beach, Calif., with Duke Snider as an opponent, he had a 66—two years after he had begun playing seriously. Two winters ago, he shot a 62.

Lowrey stays with or outdrives even the home run hitters of baseball and kills them on the greens. "I have great confidence. I feel I can get down in two on any green I reach. Some guys stew over 10-foot putts. I love 'em. And I keep the ball in play—rarely lose a ball."

Gene Mauch and his coach are the best twosome on any club in the majors. They were daily partners each off-season, before Mauch moved out of the neighborhood. This spring they beat Gene Sarazen and his knickers and Marv Higgins, a Clearwater pro, 2 and 1.

Lowrey puts Mauch on his all-star team as a putter and he also picks Al Dark for fairway woods; Albie Pearson, off the tee; Harrelson, long irons; and Ralph Terry, short irons.

"The ballplayer who hits the longest drives is Sandy Koufax," Peanuts said. "He doesn't do it consistently, though."

According to IC athletic director Joe Brooks, the wives of the president, the dean and the business manager of the and the business manager of the the Rose Poly at Illinois College doubleheader and a tennis match between the two schools scheduled for Saturday have been postponed due to a tragedy involving members of the Rose official family.

"I don't like to pop off," he replied. "All I can say is, who's gonna beat me? I'll play anybody."

Ken Harrelson, the Kansas City A's first baseman who apparently talks a good game, will pop off for you. There is a tournament for the big leaguers at Indian Wells Country Club in Palm Springs, Calif., just after the World Series. Har-
